REDUCE WASTE
Don't throw out your foam "peanuts"

Send them to the Biology Lab, (RM 212 Frame) for re-use. Imhoff's Fine Arts (in Titusville) serves as a regional "recycling" center for styrofoam peanuts, shells, squares etc. Don't coat the earth's crust with this indestructible stuff; simply send your box of foam whatnots to the Bio Lab and we'll arrange it's journey to Titusville. The children of future generations (plus I and all sorts of other famous world dignitaries) thank you.

From the 1994 Edition of the Oil City Review:

Directions

Each week we will be bringing you excerpts from the past three volumes of The Oil City Review for your reading pleasure and hopefully to also inspire the writer in you to share with us your work and consider submitting at least one of your works to the 1995 issue of the Review.

This week we are showcasing Kristen George's

An Awakening

I am a delicate seed.
Rich soil is my incubator.
A maternal sun nurtures my frail stem pushing through the earth and growing stronger from the thorns of tragedy.
My broad leaves awaken to stretch to saturate themselves with raindrops that spill, quenching my innermost thirsts.
Red velvet petal of my soul, once hidden beneath thick foliage now immerge...blossoming...
I am now a perfect rose.

It is not too soon to be thinking about your submission to the 1995 edition of the Oil City Review. Get out your pen and let your creativity spill out! All students are encouraged to submit that essay you wrote and worked so hard on to the Review. The Review considers short stories and poetry from all students, staff, faculty and community members each year. Early submissions can be placed in Dr. Terman's mailbox.

Look for more information about the Review in upcoming issues of The Voice.

Forever flowers via the microwave

To save the last rose of summer, or any beautiful bloom, try drying it in your microwave oven. Here's how to do it.

First you need a drying agent like silica gel from the craft store, or kitty litter will do. Then pick your favorite flower and cut the stem to half an inch.

Pick a microwaving container deep enough so the flower can be completely covered by the drying agent, and follow these steps:

- Put an inch of the agent in the bottom. Insert the stem so the flower is in an upright position. Carefully sprinkle the drying agent over and between all petals, keeping them in the position you want. Continue sprinkling until entirely covered.
- Microwave on high for 2½ minutes, rotating every half minute.
- Remove the container. Set aside and do not disturb at all for 12 hours while the moisture from the flower is being absorbed.

Carefully remove the flower and tap gently to remove the drying agent. Attach a false stem.

Do only one flower at a time for best results. Save the drying agent for future use.

Campus To Be Smoke -Free By The Year 2000?

Smokers had a shock their first day of class, no more smoking in Rhoades Center.

This may have been a surprise to smokers, but it is not a new policy. A Tobacco Use Policy was adopted by Clarion University Faculty Senate on May 1, 1989 with a long term goal to make Clarion a totally smoke-free campus by the year 2000.

Policy #3, Smoking is prohibited in any common use work area (i.e., an area in which two or more people work without oermanent walls or floor-to-ceiling room dividers and doors)" and Policy #4, "Smoking is prohibited in the corridors of all University buildings" were cited as the basis for recent change.

Dr. Barbara Reagle, Director Student Development, noted that smoking has been an on-going issue that both the Student Senate and Faculty Senate at Venango Campus have been working on for years. The concerns of all students have been weighed in an effort to accommodate both the smokers and the non-smokers. Last year the student union area was divided, the smokers by the windows and the non-smokers in the front. However, there have been complaints from sensitive non-smokers.

Dr. Reagle indicated that two areas had been investigated previously for designated smoking, room 118 in Frame Hall and the lower lobby area Rhoades. Both sites, however, have been rejected. Room 118 is scheduled for classes and the lower lobby has been described as a "corridor."

While the weather has been pleasant the first few days of class, smokers have to be thinking back to January, 1994's artic temperatures as they congregate outside Rhoades entrance. The year 2000 does not sound so distant any more.

This writer encourages letters to the editor with opinions on this subject.

Letter-Editor:

Smoking on Campus: Crime and Punishment?

An article appeared in the September 5 edition of the Voice about the smoking policy here at Venango . The article outlined the reasoning behind the fact that there are no longer any designated indoor smoking areas.

One of the reasons cited for the ban on smoking in Rhoades was that sensitive non-smokers had complained. As a smoker, I don't feel that this is a fair decision. First of all, I have personally witnessed non-smokers sitting in the smoking section complaining about the smoke. What kind of reasoning is that? Ridiculous!

My other problem with this rationale is the fact that the faculty and Student Senates have chosen to side with the more politically correct non-smokers rather than giving equal consideration to both sides. You would never see the school administration force non-smokers to stand outside in the middle of winter simply because the smokers didn't approve of them not smoking.

In conclusion, yes smoking is a personal choice. No, my decision to smoke shouldn't have to affect people who choose not to smoke. However, smoking is still a legal activity in this country, and unless it is banned at the state or federal level, smokers here at Venango should be treated as human beings who happen to have a different life-style choice, and not as a criminals. At the very least, give us somewhere warm to smoke this winter.

Dave Burnett-CUP Student

Student Senate Reports

Kathy Kahle of the Student Senate reports that the Senate is reviewing various possibilities for indoor smoking on campus.

The Senate encourages students both smokers and non-smokers, to voice their opinions, concerns and/or suggestions regarding the smoking policy to Interim Dean, Dr. Grunenwald. Appointments may be made at the Frame Office.

The Cultural Diversity Committee of Venango Displays Native American History And Culture

Columbus Day is just a month away. What better time than this to pay tribute to all Native Americans, past and present. For over 10,000 years, this land was inhabited by tribes of Native Americans (a.k.a. "Indians").

Since Christopher Columbus came to this hemisphere, however, western Europeans have methodically taken land, livelihood, and liberty from these first Americans. Treaty after treaty was broken by the greedy and deceitful intruders. In the last 500 years, the Native Americans have been slaughtered, forcibly removed from homelands, and often confined to life on reservations.

It also seems apt to acknowledge the reverence with which Native Americans have treated the Earth. In these days of never ending environmental crises, it is especially fitting to appreciate the harmony in which Native Americans lived with the Earth. The myopia of "western ingenuity" has dotted this land with toxic waste sites, radioactive dumps, and daily accidents that threaten the viability of life on this planet.

The Cultural Diversity Committee at Venango Campus has received a grant from the Clarion University Foundation to purchase books about Native American history and culture. These materials, which illustrate the ways and wisdom of American Indians will be on display in the lobby of Suhr Library during the Fall semester.

WHO'S WHO!

Who enjoys construction work, worked in the fitness field for 18 years and can tell you how to afford college tuition?

Angel Muschweck

As Coordinator of Placement Services, Angel assists students in writing resumes and honing job interview skills. She provides financial services regarding student loans and government grants, but also can help students with budgeting and locating community resources. Angel's office is in Montgomery Hall, room 206.

Angel graduated from Slippery Rock University with a Bachelor Degree in Physical Education/Exercise Physiology, worked in the fitness field and at a business school in Pittsburgh before coming to Venango Campus in 1991.

Angel lives in Pleasantville with her husband and three children. Her two daughters are in college studying plastics engineering and her sone is in high school and is interested in electronics.

Angel's favorite pastime is locating, buying and rehabbing "less than desirable" real estate. (Yes, she enjoys construction work!)

Angel has the following advice for students:

Financial

* Plan NOW to afford school next year - especially scholarships. Angel has software and reference materials. Make an appointment to meet with her.

* Read newspaper stories, bulletin boards in churches or grocery stores and campus posters for scholarship offers.

* Consult the guidance office of your former high school as well as high schools in the Venango area. They may have information on scholarships specifically for returning adults.

* Consult clubs and organizations representing your major. thee are books in the Career Center, room 211 Montgomery Hall with lists of names and addresses of such organizations.

* Consider Clarion's financing program, through ACADEMIC MANAGEMENT SERVICES. You can make monthly payments for tuition the year round. There is a $50 up-front fee, but no interest. Brochures may be obtained from Angel or in the Frame Hall office.

* Meet with Angel to set up a personal budget, or to locate community resources.

Job Placement

* Start preparing your resume now! Fill a folder with your student and volunteer activities, any special skills you have acquired, workshops attended (indicate the date) and samples of any special projects you have worked on as assignments.

* Use the Placement Office's laser printer to produce professional resumes at a reasonable cost.

* Practice mock interviews, and have them video taped. See Angel for details.

* Conduct informational interviews. Visit knowledgeable people in your field to discover what jobs are available.

* Try job shadowing. Tag along on a job with a person in the field that you are studying to discover if you really like this type of work.

* Get job experience in your field. This is very important. Experience can be a paid position, a co-op or volunteer experience.

Angel's goal is to make sure that no student quits school due to a financial burden.

Dave Katis Joins Campus Staff

By Peg VanHorn
Bulletin Writer

Dave Katis can be described in just one word -- excited!

As the newly appointed, full time Assistant Director of Admissions and Coordinator of Recruitment for Venango Campus, Dave is excited about a lot of things!

He is EXCITED about the challenge of recruiting traditional and returning adult students to Venango Campus; EXCITED about marketing the Venango Campus; EXCITED about the warm reception he has received from the administration, faculty, and students.

Dave hopes his excitement will be contagious, too. He encourages students to ask their friends the same questions they ask themselves. Where do you want to be in two years, in four years? Just two years older, or two years older with an associates degree? Just four years older, or four years older with a bachelors degree?

Dave says his "door is always open!" Bring potential students to his office, Frame Hall, Rm. 217 (Monday-Thursday), or schedule an appointment through him or the Frame office.

While Dave is excited about all his recruitment responsibilities, he wants to be especially attuned to the uniqueness of returning students, each with an individual history and particular needs.

Once a recruit conquers that first hurdle, the door step to Frame Hall, Dave wants to "walk them through" the admissions process, answering questions, assisting with applications and exploring financial aid resources.

Other recruitment areas that Dave is pursuing are: continuing the "Back To The Future" informational forum held several times a year for the community; interacting with business leaders to learn what special needs they may have that Venango can fill, and updating them on what Venango has to offer already, and attending college fairs at local schools to market the Venango Campus of Clarion University.

Dave Katis
Clarion Alumni

Dave knows all about being a student at the Clarion Campus, earning a Bachelors Degree in Communications and a Masters Degree in Education. But he wants to know about Venango Campus -- first hand, from the students. He is working with a group of students in Dr. Huber's Business Writing class, drawing on what they remember were their concerns as new students.

Before coming to Venango Campus, Dave worked as Director of Marketing and Public Relations at Clarion Hospital and was Administrative Director of the Clarion University Football Program.

Health Care Available

by Loni Burchfield
Writer for The Voice

Did you know that there are health care services available at Clarion Main Campus?

Edward J. Keeling Health Services Center is located off of Wilson Avenue behind Givan Hall. It is a modern facility offering a clinic and infirmary on the first floor.

The Speech Pathology and Audiology Diagnostic Center is located on the ground floor.

The Health Services provides general care to all enrolled students. They treat illness and injury, as well as providing routine medical examinations and some immunizations.

Many medications are provided for a minimal fee but prescription drugs are the responsibility of the student. Medical equipment is also available for a fee.

Keeling Health Center is staffed by registered nurses. A physician and nurse practitioner are available during regular clinic hours.

Only the services offered at the center are covered by tuition fees. Any student participating in school sports should have their own insurance coverage.

All you need is your ID to receive services. It is advisable to make an appointment so that you don't have to wait.

Attend The ALOCC Free

Dr. Jim Blake is sponsoring five students scholarships to the Campus Consortium to be held October 21-23 on Main Campus.

If you are interested in attending this conference, and acquiring experience for your resume, contact Darlene Hartman, Room 208, Montgomery Hall, to be considered for a scholarship.

In addition to Dr. Blake's scholarships, nearly 100 others are available in various capacities. Workshop facilitators and people to help with the physical arrangements are also needed.

For further information concerning the conference, see page 6.

How To Hone Your Writing Skills

Writer for The Voice

Acceptable college writing is one of the hardest skills for a new student to master. The Write-Inn Center located at 105 Frame Hall is the place to go for help.

According to Dr. Joan Huber, writing center advisor, the purpose of the Write-Inn is to help students produce the best papers possible.

The staff of nine writing tutors won't do your work for you, but they will help you with style, punctuation and spelling.

Students are asked to bring in work early in the writing process. They are also reminded that no appreciable help is available if students come in with blank paper the day before a paper is due.

Current hours for help:
Monday, 11:30 am - 8pm
Tuesday, 8:30 am -4:30 pm
Wednesday, 8:30 am - 8 pm
Thursday, 11 am- 1 pm

Student Stevette Wood says, "Every paper I completed last semester was critiqued near time of completion, by the Write-Inn tutors. In every case, my grade was considerably improved."

In addition to the help in construction and writing your paper, the Write-Inn can format and print it on one of the four IBM or two Apple computers it has available.

You don't need to do poorly in your writing endeavors. Come to the Write-Inn for help.

Advisor Assignments Have Been Posted

Advisor assignments for the Fall 1994 semester have been posted on the red wall outside of Frame Office. If you have any questions, please contact Penny Shaughnessy in the Administration Office.

Dr. Bill Belzer and Box Turtles

By Lee Masters

When I was a tot, there were Box turtles aplenty, along the creeks and rivers.

Where I grew up, we would go for water hikes and find these interesting (vertebrate) turtles just to watch them pull into their shell and close the door.

It wasn't uncommon to have one in the classroom as a pet or even at home. My mom thought a turtle a preferable pet to a dog or a cat. I was even allowed to decorate his shell.

As I got older, and out grew my friend, I opted to return him to the creekbed where I found him. Little did I know.

This is a pretty common scenario which has helped push the turtle onto the endangered species list, according to Bill Belzer. Dr. Belzer is dedicated to helping the turtle, through the McKeever Conservation Center.

The life span of this creature has been logged at more than 120 years if left alone in it's native woods. They do not reproduce during their first 10 to 15 years. Continued land development has depleted their habitat, while continued collecting for pets, have caused the turtle to almost disappear. The wild turtle is even being collected and exported to Europe, by the tens of thousands, because this activity has been banned there.

The catch and release route doesn't work either. Returning a turtle back into his habitat after being a pet, introduces disease to the whole. Some "good hearts" will catch the turtle and move them to another location they want populated. This action puts the turtle in jeopardy and upsets the natural balance. They must be left alone.

The turtle is intelligent and beneficial to our ecological system. Hopefully, and with your help, our children and grandchildren won't come to know the Box Turtle through picture books.

Fund Raiser for Turtle Conservation

To raise funds to help a turtle recovery project I'll be involved with (for decades, if I live that long!), I have turtle conservation bumper stickers to sell for $3. Also I arranged to buy a small supply of official Tee shirts (with a wonderful logo of various world turtles) left from last summer's International Conference On Turtle Conservation held in NY. Selling price is appx. $18. All margin above cost goes into the turtle work. And I can order (4-6 week shipping) a variety of really neat weatherproof sculptures of turtles, iguanas, bunnies, frogs squirrels, bear cubs, etc. (you can see them in a catalog I have). If you're interested in any of these things, get in touch.

Co-Facilitators Named For Anti-Oppression Workshop

Dr. Pat Griffin, associate professor of the Social Justice Education Program at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, will be one of two presenters at the Friday anti-oppression workshop at Venango Campus.

Co-facilitating the workshop with her is Dr. Sharon J. Washington, assistant professor in the Leisure Studies Department, Kent State University, Kent, OH.

According to Dr. Washington, she and Dr. Griffin met at a conference on recreation where they realized their interests coincided. They found they were doing similar work in their respective fields. As a result of their collaboration, this is the fourth workshop they have done together.

The conference will endeavor to present diversity, multi-culturalism and give an approach to the inter-relatedness of all forms of oppression.

Dr. Washington indicated that it is hoped that people will take away a greater awareness of how they fit into society. Also, she stated that certain actions can unintentionally perpetrate oppression.

She indicated, "the issues are complex. Many people do not realize what they are doing."

She indicates there are personal, institutional and cultural levels of oppression. There is an inter-relatedness but there is no hierarchy of oppression worse than another.

The workshop will be from 9 am to 1 pm in Rhoades Center.

CONCERT SET FOR EVENING

The Washington Sisters, Sharon and Sandra, will appear at 7:30 pm Friday evening at Rhoades Center.

These talented twins will present a program of jazz, swing, blues, Brazilian, ballads, country and gospel music.

According to Sharon, they perform in a style for everyone.

The Washington Sisters have been performing for nearly eleven years and have appeared in all but six states.

They consider their offering to be both political and community work.

The pair, along with their musician mother, began singing when they were in high school.

Pianist for the pair is Melanie Monsur who lives in Santa Fe, NM. Ms. Monsur is a professional musician who will perform some of her original pieces as a part of the evening's entertainment. She has accompanied the Washington Sisters for nearly eight years.

Sandra Washington is an outdoor recreation planner for the National Park Service. She recently completed the Brown VS Board of Education National Historic Site as a part of her work.

The concert is free to the public.

Both the concert and workshop are funded by a social equity grant from the Office of the Chancellor.

Meeting Set

Psychology Club to meet 1 pm October 4 in Rhoades Center for final planning of semester activities.

Who's Who!

Who's great-great-great-great-great-great-great grandmother was hanged for being a witch? Who enjoys scuba diving and attends almost every workshop and student activity on campus?

Kim Price, Coordinator of Student Activities

As Coordinator of Student Activities, Kim Price oversees all student clubs and organizations, is the advisor for the Campus Activities Board (CAB), is financial advisor for the Student Senate, advisor for the mentor program, conducts leadership training and coordinates the orientation programs and the commencement ceremony.

Kim has a Bachelor of Arts degree in German and a Bachelor of Science degree in Secondary Education from Clarion University, a Masters of Arts in Counseling/Educational Psychology from Slippery Rock University and has attended the Stuttgart University in Germany.

Kim's advice for students:

"College can really be the most exciting time of your life. Take in as much as possible, not only the academics, but also become involved in campus life. Whether you belong to an organization or participate in an event, there is always so much going on! Don't let these experiences slip by."

If you are interested in a club or an organization on campus, but have not officially signed up, just show up at the next meeting! Watch for posters and read the Voice for date, time and location.

Kim lives in Oil City with her husband and two dogs. And, yes, Kim's eighth great grandmother, Rebecca Nurse, was one of nineteen people put to death for witchcraft during the witch hysteria in 1692 in Salem, Mass. It is believed that Mrs. Nurse's execution was the result of an individual's wanting a large parcel of property she owned. (The witchcraft hysteria died off when the Governor's wife was accused as well.)

The family homestead is still in Massachusetts and is a historic site.

Kim is President and founder of the Oil City Fine Arts Council. The council's mission is to promote dance, theatre, music, films, and video, creative writing, and poetry, painting, sculpture and other forms of visual art to benefit the Oil City community and the Oil Region.

Kim is a member of the Oil Heritage Region Cultural Development and Assessment Team, has been a board member of Belle Lettre (a former literature club, now a civic organization) and the American Cancer Society-- and likes to scuba dive.

Sounds like Kim practices what she preaches when she suggests involvement!!

Protecting Our Children

The streets are not as safe today as they were when we were children. Parents today would never consider letting their child out to play at 9 am without knowing their whereabouts and not seeing them until he/she came home for supper. Although no one will guarantee your child's safety 100% - Child Shield USA can ensure you're doing your best to keep your child safe.

Protecting Our Children will be presented by Child Shield, USA at 7:30 pm, October 4 in Rhoades Center.

Child Shield, USA, President David Slockbower will be the evening's keynote speaker. The discussion will emphasize a pro-active approach towards the safety of your children, through education.

However, abductions and runaways will also be addressed. Slockbower will teach us an invaluable lesson on how to disseminate information quickly, which is the key to successful recovery of a child.

There will be a question and answer period and refreshments will be served. This event is sponsored by the Campus Board of Activities and is free and open to the public.

This is an event we all should attend.

Dr. Barb Reagle Says....

"Keep A Balance In Life"

By Peg VanHorn

"Keep a balance in life," stresses Dr. Barbara Reagle, Director of Student Development. "Go easy on yourself! If you fall, at least you are going in the right direction -- forward." Reject any "negative tapes that play in your head." Nurture a positive attitude. "Have fun! Be the best person you can be!"

This is the advice Barb gives students, but how does she keep balance in her life have fun?

Reading Dostoevskii (one of the world's great writers who influenced modern literature, 1821-1881), motorcycling the backwoods on her new Honda Shadow 500, relearning the piano after 30 years, running the bike trail daily and arming coworkers with squirt guns the first day of class, will help to balance the intellectual, the physical and the fun.

Barb's interest in wellness is rooted in her undergraduate work in physical education with a BS & Masters degree from Slippery Rock University. She earned a PH.D. from the University of Pittsburgh in Higher Education with an emphasis on Student Affairs, Administration and Counseling.

Before CUP-Venango, Barb worked at Villa Maria, Gannon, Goucher College in Maryland, Slippery Rock, Pitt-Titusville and Allegheny College. (Notice, there's a main campus, a branch campus, a state school, and a private school - balance.)

Barb is the mother of three sons, Jason a senior at Clarion, Joshua, a senior at Titusville High School and Breese a preschooler. (Barb's family covers all childhood development spectrums - balance.)

One area Barb in which is very serious and strives to exceed a safe balance, is in the Student Services Department. "This is a gem of a campus," explains Barb, but we still continually strive to improve services. Student input is welcome and encouraged. "Tell us what you like and dislike about policy, services and the campus in general. The focus of student services is customer service. The students are the customers!"

Whether it's work or play, a Honda or Dostoevskii, Dr. Barbara Reagle knows when to balance and when to transcend.

Discover: A Class Requirement?

Students: Have any of your professors assigned a visit to the Career Counseling Center as part of your course requirements?

Have they offered bonus points for investigating the vast range of career development options found in the DISCOVER software program?

If you answered yes to either or both of these questions, then I would like to remind you to schedule an appointment at the Career Counseling Center as soon as possible.

As the Center's career counselor, I like to meet with students on an individual basis so I can give my full attention to your career planning needs.

I am in my office, M-Tu-W, 9 am to 3 pm. Alternate hours are available if needed. Call 676-6591, ext. 272.

LETTER: EDITOR

I'm concerned for all those students out there on campus who may be having difficulty with their car. Last semester mine had a mind of its own and I could do nothing to dissuade it from breaking down.

When it decided it didn't want to start, I went immediately to my student phone numbers. I contacted people who lived near me whether I knew them or not.

I made it to class, sometimes late, but "better late than never!"

If you have a 'difficult' car, use the ride section of the bulletin board in Rhoades Hall.

You may find the perfect car pooling person, or a back-up ride.

Hopefully helpful,
Shelley Heckathorn

JoAnn

I love the autumn season. Autumn, to me, is like seeing a very special friend that you haven't seen for such a longtime, the kind of friend that you would call a soul-mate. You wrap your arms around each other in such a tight all consuming embrace that actually makes you feel an inner peace and yet you feel as if you might explode from the joy it brings. Sometimes I am autumn, everything about autumn, the colors....reds, golds, browns, oranges, and grays. I am the smells of autumn....dead leaves, the inside of a carved pumpkin, the smell of cold fresh air, but I am so much more than a season.

I am a six year old girl that stomps her dry tennis shoes into a deep rain puddle, and then laugh at how much fun it really is. I am a woman/child who eyes up the snow that the mall maintenance plows into mountains of white. When my mouth cracks into a mischievous grin, my children know that their 'grown' mother will jump feet first into that mountain. Guiltily, I inwardly chuckle at my thirteen year old's red, embarrassed face. He has so much to learn about life.

Sometimes I am an eighty year old woman "tsking" at how bizarre and cold the world seems. There are times when I am no age.....at all.....young or old. I am infinity, in both directions.

Sometimes I am one and the same with thunderstorms. I stand outside with my glasses off, face uplifted to catch the droplets, absorb them into my skin. I listen with my heart pounding to all of the rumbling crashes that make it seem as if someone has their bass turned all the way up, the way you feel loud drums in the pit of your gut. The dark sky lights up all the way around you and you can't even really tell where the bolt of lightning was centered. Once in a while, I become that eighty year old woman again and go back inside, wondering if I could be, almost, insane, and then watch the storm from behind a pane of glass.

At certain times when the moon is full, I go outside, with music from my stereo playing loud enough to hear without waking the kids., and I dance. Occasionally, I try to include my children, their eyes drink up the view of twinkles and beams, they yawn and go back to bed. If a friend happens to be there when the urge strikes, I then drag her/him outside to praise the moon along with me. Some of my friends never come back at nighttime, but others make a point to; (beauty being in the eye of the beholder and all.)

Most of the time I am a single mother struggling to raise two children. Most of the time I am a 'housewife trying to keep the bills paid, praying the car will last another year, wishing better things for my children, trying to maintain the house and yard work. Most of the time I worry that I won't get the job that a hundred other people apply for that would earn enough money to raise my children on. At times I look around and I do see the darkness, but sometimes.....

Oh, sometimes I have wings that span fifty feet or more, and I soar until the atmosphere starts getting thin. I don't fly back down to earth right away, no, I savor every second that my soul is blessed with those wonderful feathers. It's as though my wings are always there, they just seem to fold up for a period of time. When I really need them they seem to sense it, and then they begin to extend.

My name is JoAnn. According to Funk & Wagnall's Home and Student Dictionary (1989) p. 620. JoAnn is " feminine of John [Heb] Yahweh is gracious". JoAnn means so much more, listen very intently...she...JoAnn....infinity, autumn, six years old, thunderstorms, feathers, full moons, rain puddles, an old woman, wings, single mother, wishing, darkness, hope, laughter, childhood....

Funk & Wagnall have no idea what JoAnn means.

Editors Notes:

Trapper Writes On Smoking Policy

Dear Editors,

Well another semester is upon us, and as I look forward with trepidation to another loaded course schedule, I am embarking on a new journey; Main!

Everyone should try this place. The diversity of students is awesome. Coming here from our scheduled niche is an eye-opening experience that you, as a student, have to encounter to believe.

Enough of this frivolity, let us get to the reason for my writing. I has been told by many campus students that there is now a NO SMOKING policy for YOUR student center. While there have also been a change in the snack shop operation. The latter will have future benefits down the road, but the former issue has been wrangled about for at least three years.

It was related to me that Rhoades is like a "GHOST TOWN", in that the majority of the populace that used the facility are now forced to the outside. As this may be a good idea now, the weather in the coming months will necessitate an undue hardship to smokers. I have also learned that a new agreement with the proprietors of the snack bar is causing some consternation due to the fact that initial sales figures are not what were expected. (How do you think that happened?)

I recall that we as a Senate discussed this very issue in the 1992-93 term, and that it was suggested that smoke eaters be installed in the center. A committee was set up to look into there cost, and a decision to purchase these units tabled due to budget constraints. However, there was money to acquire much needed grills for the use of our many cookouts.

In my investigation of the matter, I contacted the campus maintenance staff, and was told that the air exchanger that circulates fresh air in the building has the capacity to exchange the air completely every seven minutes, and it is currently not being used to maximum capacity (this may necessitate verification on your part), which could allow for the return of the silent majority to enjoy the center once again.

It is my hope that the current Student Senate would pursue this violation of student rights and solve this matter A.S.A.P. to everyone's satisfaction.

Here is to a great semester,
Lynn (Trapper) McDonald

THOUGHTS FROM PLACEMENT SERVICES

I recently received a returned Student Services Survey with a negative comment that initially upset me. Unfortunately, the student chose not to sign the survey so I couldn't be of help to him/her at this point. Perhaps I can give some information that will keep other students in the future from having the same results.

First, the comments on the survey:

"After graduating Summa Cum Laude with an Associate Degree in computers, the only job I was contacted about was a sales position in a toy store. No suggestions were made toward improving my resume or building a credential file, etc."

The student indicated that they had made use of the Placement Services offered here on campus. I wonder exactly what use the student made of the experience.

All students at Venango Campus have the opportunity to attend at least four different Job Search Skills Workshops annually. In these workshops resume construction is elaborated upon and the student is encouraged to make individual appointments to continue to upgrade that resume. A finished resume is never finished. The resume may change slightly with every different job opportunity depending on what the student needs to emphasize for that particular job. At the Job Search Skills Workshops.

Credential File papers are distributed and are also available by walking down to 206 Montgomery Hall and asking for them.

Placement Services gives very specific instructions for building a credential file if one will take the necessary time to do the leg work. From the comment of the above student he/she waited for the employer to contact him/her. Attending any of the workshops or having an individual appointment would have enlightened this student concerning the present day job search. One cannot wait around to be contacted. One must constantly be networking and perhaps be willing to relocate, especially if the major selected is accounting. Please start early to plan your job search. Don't find yourself in the position of the above student. Take control of your future. Ask questions, don't stop till you get an answer. Job search skills are every bit as important as the information learned in classes. Take advantage of the good workshop information and the opportunity to have individual attention. It will take time, effort, and a take charge attitude on the part of the student. Do you have what it takes? I hope so!

Interim Dean "To Keep Things Moving"

By: Peg VanHorn-Voice Writer

Dr. Joseph Grunenwald, Interim Executive Dean, might have an interim position, but he is determined that his administration will not be merely transitional. "I want to make sure things keep moving," says Dean Grunenwald. Community relations, permanent staffing and development of new curricula cannot wait until a new dean is in place.

According to Dr. Grunenwald, area citizens, business people, government agencies and school guidance departments need to know what Venango Campus has to offer. Likewise, Venango Campus needs to learn what it can do for the community. Dr. Grunenwald, along with Dave Katis, newly appointed Assistant Director of Admissions, Dr. Barbara Reagle, Director of Student Development, and other staff plan to continue this exchange with the community.

Venango can help the community through continued examination of two year programs in health related fields, such as the Occupational Therapy program Richard Sabousky is reviewing. Other possibilities are two year mechanical and engineering technology programs.

Dr. Grunenwald is excited about the new campus day care center and hopes to expand other student support systems as well.

"Venango has a special blend of students," says Dr. Grunenwald. They are focused and involved. Their education combined with previous work and life experiences will enhance their future job prospects. (cont. pg 2, col. 2)

Do I Really Need This?

While sitting in class have you ever asked yourself, "when am I ever going to use this?", or "Why do I need to know this?"

Many students feel that certain classes have nothing to do with their majors, and question the relevancy of taking the class.

Student Services is offering an open lecture by Dr. Martha Ritter, associate professor of Biology, on why certain general education classes are required.

General education class requirements and a question and answer session will be held at noon, Thursday in Rhoades Center.

A light lunch will be provided.

Twelve To Attend NACA Conference

Carol Boyle-Voice Writer

Twelve Venango Campus students will attend the 30th annual conference for the National Association for Campus Activities to be held October 27 to 30 at Seven Springs Resort in South Central Pennsylvania.

This is the annual meeting of the Great Lakes Region which includes Kentucky, West Virginia, Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Chief among the meetings and information presented at this forum is "Getting the Most Out of Your NACA Membership," given by Kim Price of Venango Campus and Ellen Deem of the University of Pittsburgh, Titusville Campus.

Other sessions at the event include educational meetings for professional and leadership development, meetings in the exhibit hall with all entertainers and their agents and a resource center where all conference materials are available.

Students from Campus who will be attending this event are Kathy Kahle, Kristin Kulling, Gina Sleppy, Melissa Smith, Amy Krizon, Joe Reinsel, Joe Anderton, Eric Burchfield, Phil Close, Darrin Schwabenbauer, Jamie Albaugh and Darla Ausel.

The conference event will also include Main Stage Showcases, programs to entertain and educate the delegates. These will include bands, comedians, jugglers, lecturers, magicians and others.

If you have often wondered where the groups presented here at campus as a part of our activity schedule come from, this is it.

This group will also have the responsibility of working with other campuses in our area to plan block booking of performers in order to get a reduced price.

Mrs. Price tells us that a Diversity Caucus will be held at the event to help in developing awareness of diversity issues that impact the NACA Great Lakes Region.

A Venango Campus Spotlight will be presented by our participants at the event. According to Michael Turner of Slippery Rock, this year's NACA Diversity Coordinator, "Respect, knowledge and cultural awareness are key factors that will serve to motivate Caucus participants." Scholarships and grants will be presented at the close of the conference.

Brooks Wows Audience

A Review By Carol Boyle

The Audience sat spell-bound as poet-laureate, Gwendolyn Brooks, shared her poetry October 2 in Hart Chapel, Clarion University.

This small black lady of 77 years spoke with a strong voice, a wonderful sense of humor and firm convictions.

Her poetry affirmed her impressions of life in Black Society.

Her expression was bold and straight forward. She was speaking in messages to us all.

This tiny lady with the strong voice, that, at once, can draw you in, make you smile and also bring tears to your eyes.

Her poetry is broad and her subjects familiar to us all.

Miss Brooks explained that she dislikes the term African-American. She would much rather be called Black. " Black comes out to meet you, eye to eye!" she stated.

She uses her poetry to address the truths of life, ugly or pretty, but always the truth.

Gwendolyn Brooks was born in Topeka, KS., but has lived all of her life in Chicago, IL., where she was a graduate of Wilson Junior College.

Legacy Of An Adopted Child

Once there were two women
Who never knew eachother
One you do not remember
The other you call mother.
Two different lives
Shaped to make yours one.
One became your guiding star
The other became your sun.
The first gave you life
And the second taught you to live in it
The first gave you a need for love
And the second was there to give it.
One gave you a nationality
The other gave you a name
One gave you the seed of talent
The other gave you an aim.
One gave you emotions
The other calmed your fears
One saw your first sweet smile
The other dried your tears.
One gave you up-It was all that she could do.
The other prayed for a child.
And God led her straight to you.
And now you ask me
Through your tears,
The age-old questions
Through the years:
Heredity or environment-
Which are you the product of?
Neither, my darling-neither
Just two different kinds of love.

"You don't have to be crazy!"

Peg VanHorn-Voice Writer

A pillowed rocking chair, a braided throw rug, a shawl tossed across a chair, lamp light and mugs of hot tea, this is the atmosphere in room 202 Montgomery, comfortable, relaxing, private.

Counselor, Kay King invites students and faculty to visit ... relax ... talk. ''You don't have to be crazy to seek counseling,'' urges Kay.

Who should make an appointment?

* Anyone who is experiencing a family crisis, relationship problems, is depressed, has an eating disorder
* Students juggling home, multiple roles and school
* Returning adults adjusting to college life
* Psychology students wanting career advise
* Anyone wanting self help books for their personal use or class assignments
* Faculty who want feedback about handling student situations
* Anyone who just wants to talk

Kay can offer crisis counseling or help with decision making and problem solving. Whether the situation is more serious like depression, or just making education plans that coincide with one's personal life, Kay is available. Kay's goal is to reach as many people as possible.

Besides individual counseling, a support Group meets every Monday, 3:30-5:00 pm in room 207 Montgomery Hall. Anyone interested in joining may call Kay. The support group is a place to try new ways of coping, a practical place to learn techniques that will help with behaviors the rest of your life. (Kay hopes to develop a support group around the nursing schedule as well.)

Kay's personal goal is to be more authentic and honest with herself and others. ''It seems today that people are confused about themselves, looking outside themselves for answers and they lose sight of their own abilities to look inward." says Kay.

She is troubled by the exploitation of privacy in the lives of individuals portrayed by the media, particularly television talk shows and the news. ''There must be a greater respect for privacy; we have gone too far.'' stresses Kay. Dignity is lost through this exploitation. Where is one's pride?

Dignity, pride, privacy and authenticity are important to Kay. Kay and her husband, Mike, have been married 25 years. They live on a farm near Emlenton with their two sons, Irah, 16 and Abby, 13 and a goat, chickens and turkeys. Kay loves to play tennis, plant flowers, collect antiques and cook ethnic foods.

Kay earned a bachelor's degree in psychology from Grove City as a traditional student. Fifteen years later, she returned as a nontraditional student to earn her master's degree in social work from the University of Pittsburgh. In May 1994 Kay graduated from a three year post graduate program in Gestalt Methods from the prestigious Gestalt Institute of Cleveland. "I will be a student forever," say's Kay, "This keeps my work interesting and personally keeps me challenged with a growing edge." Before coming to Clarion, Kay ran an infant center for pregnant teens, was an administrator at a child abuse council, worked at Family Services in Oil City as a therapist, was a consultant and ran workshops.

Kay King -- comfortable, private, honest and authentic; you have to be crazy to pass up an opportunity to visit with Kay!

Kay is at Venango on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. Call 676-6591 ext. 277 for an appointment, or stop by room --- Montgomery.

LETTER: Editor

There is a lot of controversy on this campus about smokers being banned from Rhoades Lounge. I am a smoker myself. I realize that smoking is not good for me and it is even worse for those who breathe my second-hand smoke.

According to the "Tobacco Use Policy" of Clarion University, dated February 23, 1989, "the long term goal regarding tobacco products is to make Clarion University a totally smoke free campus by the year 2000, and to do this primarily through educational efforts and through providing support for persons who request assistance in abandoning the use of tobacco products."

Lung Cancer is the number one killer of men and women today followed by emphysema and heart disease. We know we should quit yet we still smoke. I have tried to quit several times but he habit keeps drawing me back. I signed up for a support group on this campus in 1992 and never heard anything else about it.

To ban smoking in certain areas will not stop us from smoking. Most of us will become more stubborn about our habit because we feel our rights and needs are being infringed upon. We understand the needs and rights of nonsmokers and we would like ours understood also.

This new policy has given some of us reason to pause and rethink our position as smokers. Some of us do want to quit. Along with making the buildings smoke free, why not strive to move the students, faculty, and staff to become smoke free. After all, it is the people, smokers and nonsmokers, that make this campus what it is.

By now, students are beginning to adjust to campus life. Also, many are feeling as if they need a better game plan.

Whether or not you have settled on the right major for you, or you are just taking a myriad of general courses you know will be required in all majors, it is time to sit back and assess your life as a college student.

The following are some of the social and personal things you may be dealing with:

Perhaps you are sharing an apartment, have a roommate, are becoming involved with activities, or becoming acquainted with a new peer group.

You are, for the first time, managing a budget, coping with loneliness (close friends take time to develop), or making decisions or solving problems.

Managing classes , activities and a job can be tough.

Learning to be assertive is important, as is learning to set the goals you want and need.

Academically, as students, you have found you now have more demanding class work, and that there are greater differences in class size.

You are attending daily lectures and taking more notes than you have ever taken in your life.

Good writing skills and meeting deadlines for papers are paramount in your life now.

You are, quite probably, taking tests that require problem solving, and that may be a whole new way of thinking to you.

Completing long reading assignments and making sure you understand the material that is most important to you.

Be sure you take part in class discussions, even if it is difficult for you to speak up. Once you have started to answer in class, you will find that it gets easier.

Be prepared for each class, each day, utilizing good study habits.

Finally, remember that Venango Campus has a good staff of tutors available to help you through the difficult spots.

College life is not always easy. It takes time to adjust.

But, those who put forth honest effort will find it very rewarding.

Stress

By: Lee Masters Voice Writer

With stress of job, homework, housework, and family responsibilities, we could all use more hours in the day.

Some professors may not agree, but students feel we should take a break! Put those school books in the back room, hide the dirty clothes in the closet, shut your eyes as you walk past those dishes in the sink, and head out the door.

Take a walk and look at the leaves or head down by the river. Go to the local diner and treat your self to pie ala mode and a cup of tea.

Relax and dream of a vacation or winning the lottery and how you'll spend the money.

You'll be refreshed and ready to conquer anything.

Halloween Dance

The Campus Activities Board announces the annual Halloween dance at Rhoades Center, 8:00 pm, Thursday. Music will be provided by the DJ "Posey", until the witching hour. Prizes will be awarded for best costume and other categories. Refreshments will be served.

Are To Speak About Middle East Peace

Rev. Thomas Are, author of the book "Israeli Peace/Palestinian Justice", will be a guest speaker on that topic at Clarion University of PA on October 26 at 3:30 pm in Rm 250-252 of the Gemmell Student Complex. The presentation is free and open to the public.

In the past five years, Are developed a passion for peace and justice, especially in the Middle East. He believes the main issue facing the world today is global economic injustice along with wars, hunger and ecology.

In 1992 he served as a missionary to the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. "The most challenging ecclesiastical influence has been my relationship with Naim Ateek, Canon of the Episcopal Church of Jerusalem, and Marc Ellis, Orthodox Jew of Maryknoll, NY, who have made me aware of the great injustices to the little people of the Middle East," says Are.

Clarion To Observe Famous Supreme Court Decision

On May 16, 1954, a little over 40 years ago, the United States Supreme Court ruled that, separate but equal schools were unconstitutional, in the landmark Brown Vs. Board of Education case.

Clarion University will observe this famous decision, through guest speaker Cheryl Brown Henderson, at 7:30 pm today in Hart Chapel.

Ms. Henderson is one of the three daughters of the late Rev. Oliver L. Brown. In the fall of 1951, Brown, along with 12 other families, led by attorneys for the NAACP, filed suit in behalf of their children, against the local board of education in Topeka, KS. At that time, Rev. Brown's daughters and the other children, because their skin was black, had to travel across town to go to school rather than attend the elementary school four blocks away.

Three years later a unanimous court decision stated that separate but equal schools were unconstitutional.

Mrs. Henderson has been an educator for 20 years. She is currently a state educational administrator.

Clarion University Martin Luther King Jr. committee is sponsoring this event which is free and open to the public.

Student Senate Report

Did you know this campus is like a stamp on a letter? Venango Campus consists of 67 acres. We students own this land by proxy, if you will. LANDHOLDERS, lets pose a question. What shall we do with our new found holdings? Shall we build condos for people or bats? Should we bulldoze and cement it over? Maybe we create trails among the trees where furry forest critters live.

We want your ideas. Drop off your suggestions to any senator or at Rhoades Center.

Learn How To Learn

What kind of learner am I and why should that make any difference? That's what I wanted to know so I stopped in at the learning skills center and asked Darlene Hartman. Darlene says there are three basic types of learner; kinesthetic, auditory, and visual. Kinesthetic is hands on learning, such as lab work, real world approaches to problem solving and so forth. Students who get more out of reading a text or using groups are most likely visual learners. Those who prefer lectures or learn best in discussions tend to be auditory learners. According to Darlene, you don't have to be a genius to get good grades in college. What you need to do is find out what kind of learner you are and adapt yourself to it. Since each text and professor is different, you should know how to adapt your learning strategies for each class. Students who want to become efficient learners should contact Darlene in Rm 208, Montgomery Hall, Ext. 283, for an appointment.

The Turtles Vacation

By Lee Masters

Imagine you've lived in the woods for 25 years. You know where all the good food and drinking water is. When the weather changes, there is no fear, you're right at home.

All your bird friends call good morning to you and the squirrels and chipmunks skitter round your path with a wave of their tail.

One day you wander close to that hard black area that use to be a field, full of good food and home of many friends. All gone now. You still shake your head after these 10 long years, and wonder why.

Suddenly, you're picked off the ground and hauled into one of those moving boxes filled with the human smell. They are so loud and touchy. They keep trying to make you eat crackers and cheese curls and chocolate covered raisins when you really want and need grasshoppers, plants, worms, wild fruits and some clean cool water. There is no fresh air, no friends. You want to go home.

I read an article in our local paper recently about a turtle that took a 1,000 mile trip from PA and back. This is how I figured he felt. First he loses a small field to pavement and then loses his freedom.

Let's all leave the turtle to his natural habitat before he appears on the endangered species list.

Give Yourself A Star

Go ahead, give yourself a star. Every class, before you close your book, try to remember 5 important things that you've just covered. This will start the long term memory process by clearing your working memory. You will then be able to go to your next class ready and able to learn. When you get home, try to remember those five points again. This will bring those facts out of short term storage to working memory, where you can begin to place them in long-term storage through mnemonics, recitation or other memory techniques.

PROMISE YOURSELF

Promise yourself to be so strong that nothing can disturb your peace of mind. To talk health, happiness and prosperity to every person you meet. To make all your friends feel that there is something in them. To look at the sunny side of everything and make your optimism come true. To think only of the best, to work only for the best, and expect only the best. To be just as enthusiastic about the success of others as you are about your own. To forget the mistakes of the past and press on to the greater achievements of the future. To wear a cheerful countenance at all times and give every living creature you meet a smile. To give so much time to the improvement of yourself that you have no time to criticize others. To be too large for worry, too noble for anger, too strong for fear and too happy to permit the presence of trouble.

The Oil City Review: Directions

Darlene Hartman, The Voice

"Holben, if your I.Q. was three point lower, you'd be grass!"

The loud, strident voice said these words to me every day in Economics class. Sometimes a large index finger with a cracked and yellowed nail would wag in my face in rhythm to the daily cadence.

Every day I would become more and more distanced from the room, the class, the subject, the teacher, the words. I was retreating into a fantasy land where numbers and GNPs, graphs, tables and pain couldn't go.

I retreated to avoid the words.

One day I escaped so far and so well that I missed the dismissal bell. I didn't see the rest of the class leave. I just sat there with my head turned toward the windows.

I awoke when the finger poked my shoulder as the voice shrieked my name.

From that day on my desk was pushed against the teacher's desk.

My vantage point gave me new material to escape on as the litany began. I could see globules of spit as they danced on. A watery thread next to his tonsils then gathered in a little froth at the hinge of his lips.

Lower than grass,
lower than grass.
the words would echo and I would glide off to a meadow filled with flowers and sunshine and cool May breezes. I'd watch a ladybug chase aphids up a daisy stalk. I'd hear the heavy drone of a bumblebee as it searched for nectar in a head of clover. I'd see the plant bend as the insect sucked its life again,

"Are you getting this, Holben?"

Why should I? Who cared? I didn't want the class, I had no choice. I was trapped and I wasn't "getting it." How did this happen? Who's to blame?

Shut up voice so I can think!
Lower than grass, lower than grass,
my mind is the sickles edge and my silent words are mowing you down.

Your venom has no effect on me as I bundle you into a sheaf. My movements are graceful as I run the pitchfork in and carry the pile to be burned. No winnowing for you, your spiteful, demeaning words must end. The fire consumes it all the chaff, the seed, the stalk.

The ashes are stomped beneath my feet.

See, you wanted to break me with your words, but it's you who pays the cost.

The finger is back. As it points at me, the voice is growing loud. The class is laughing and starting to go, but I am told to stay.

I'm lazy, I'm rude and dull-witted, and slow. "This has gone far enough. It's nearing the end of the year. Has everything run in and out of your ears? Don't give me that Then, you're through!"

I fled from his den and his peacocky swagger to the safety of poems and music and books. But, my mind was EXPLODING with anger and STRESS. How dare he, the creep! Last chance and I was through, ha! Who did he think he was, God? He probably pictured himself as Saint Peter with heavenly knowledge of
"when I must go."

What a crock. Just because I found him and the whole subject boring, he thought I was dumb. Because I was not in the least impressed by "His Coachship," my mental abilities substandard. Phooey!

Wouldn't he just die if he knew how many poems were given birth in his class. I had tons of adventures while he yammered on and on and on. He'd never know how vast were my thoughts. My words were fluent and expressive and calm. They teased me into sunlit places where he could never go.

Lower than grass, Lower than grass, what a fool he is!
Under the grass is the earth sustaining, enriching, upholding, alive.

Loamy, soft, rich black soil where my roots sink deep. Try to pull me out finger and you'll see it's no easy task.

The voice is diminished as he goes back the aisle.

It's safe for a moment.

Oh, please soon be over. I want to leave. This is all a terrible mistake. I want Spanish. I want more words. She said, "You can't take any more languages. You must have a balanced schedule."

I begged and I pleaded but budge she would not. "Try economics since you already have a math. It will tie-in nicely and prepare you for college."

I didn't want to go to college. I wanted to fly. There were places I had to see and things I had to do.

Lower than grass, lower than grass,

"You aren't working up to your potential."

I'd heard these words for years. They had no more effect on me. My mind was numbing to the voice. The finger lost its jab. My potential loomed before me tall, straight, brushing the clouds.

Its slick sides glinted in the light. Powerful swells of harmonies rang from within. Billows of glowing amber mist swirled around the bottom.

It was glorious and grand and very, very unattainable. I searched in vain for an opening and tried to scale the sides. I pawed and dug and jumped and failed. I couldn't reach my potential. I thought, how sad, but wasn't sad. My potential was gorgeous to see. It was iridescent and shimmery in real live 3-D. I felt comfort in knowing it was there if I ever needed it. I knew it would wait.

The finger poked.

The voice bellowed.
I smiled.

I knew my I.Q. I had my potential.

The words couldn't kill me.

BACK TO THE FUTURE SERIES A WHOPPING SUCCESS!

The Back To The Future series, held November 7, was out of this world, according to Dave Katis, Assistant Director of Admissions and Coordinator of Recruitment.

This series is intended to make the general public aware of Venango Campus as an option in their education, career planning, and job retraining.

Dr. Joseph Grunenwald, acting Dean of Venango Campus, was the keynote speaker. "Education is not just training for a specific job, but also gives flexibility to take advantage of changes and opportunities that come our way."

Presentations were given from, Dave Katis, Admissions and Academic Programs, Ms. Angel Muschweck, Venango Career Services, Dr. Barb Reagle, Venango Support and Student Services, and Ken Grugel, Financial Aid.

A panel of returning adult students shared their experiences of balancing classes, kids, and jobs. Panel members were Bobbi Jo Sparks, Kim Snyder, Cindie Litwiler, Stevette Wood, and Bill Gaisford.

Representatives from Mellon Bank, New Choice, and J.T.P.A. were on hand to answer questions about financing and career opportunities.

Most of the 55 people in attendance were experienced adults with questions about financing, scheduling, and day care.

The excitement was felt and motivation never left the room. One gentleman spoke out from the audience and said, "You,ve kept me motivated for three hours without having a cigarette, and I'll be coming back."

Applications were filled out and the fees paid on the spot by three people. The phone hasn't quit ringing, with people from the series wanting to schedule.

Dave Katis said he was overwhelmed by the success of the evening and thanks every one who gave of their valuable time and knowledge.

Another Back To The Future series is tentativly scheduled for January 5, according to Dave Katis, who would like to take this show on the road.

Dr. Kole and Mr. Reid, of the American Lung Association, will conduct an introduction to smoking cessation program, Noon, Wednesday, November 30, in Rhoades.

The program will take a holistic approach towards breaking the habit and help students and faculty find an approach that aims at success.

Everyone is encouraged to attend. Non-smokers should consider attending to gain a better understanding of smokers and their task in quiting. When a smoker makes the decision to cease smoking, having positive supporters around them increases their success rate, according to Dr. Kole.

A light lunch will be provided.

The State Work-Study program is now accepting applications, according to Angel Muschweck.

Students interested in the program must apply by the February 1 deadline.

Many employers are already familiar with this program that, pays a portion of the students wages.

Students may also locate employers they desire to work for, have them fill out a form, and they can become a part of this program.

This is a great opportunity to give yourself an edge in being hired.

There will be an informal session on securing summer work through the SWSP program at 11 am Tuesday in Rhoades Lobby.

If you are interested in this program but are not able to attend this session, contact Angel Muschweck in Rm 206 Montgomery Hall or phone, 676-6591 ext 278.

Finals Scheduled Form Study Groups Now

Finals are only a few weeks away. Studies show that students who join and participate in study groups, get assistance from the Learning Center, and seek tutoring, tend to score higher on finals than other students.

Have You Heard The Monday Memos Lately?

I haven't.

What are the Monday Memos?

For those of you who are not aware of the memos, they are a weekly printed collection of pertinent information from the administration offices, faculty, and clubs, to the students and faculty.

I realize that not all of the information contained, on the memo, is for students. However, there is a great amount of information contained therein that is vital, timely and informative for the general student.

Request each of your professors to take two minutes of class time to read the weekly memo, or pass it around class for you to glance at, it's your right, and sometimes your salvation!

By: Stevette Wood
Voice Writer

Why Are Memos Important To Read? Because Posters Aren't Always Effective

As discussed in Dr. Carie Fordens's Psychology class, most posters on the walls are similar in size, shape and color, making the menagerie of posters displayed on campus less effective.

(A suggestion from the writer)
Clubs and organizations should consider trying a new concept. Possibly, one color for each specific club, etc?

Into The Light

Pretty Woman, By: Christine Hunt

They could see her shapely figure.
They watched her lovely face,
whistled at her hips
that swayed with sensual grace.

When she crossed the churning water on that long narrow walk, the men returned to working,
and resumed their ribald talk.

In the crisp, blue autumn sky
The sun cast a brilliant glow
Upon the trembling water below.

Each time a fresh face did appear the men would pause at last, and not resume their work again until the vision passed.

They could see her shapely figure.
They watched her lovely face,
whistled at her hips
that swayed with a sensual grace.

They started in to whistle, as though it were a game.
Above the clamor and the din,
The water called her name.

She could not hear them whistle, nor shout at her in vain.
They could see her shapely figure
But they could not see her pain.

Silence echoed all around, when she balanced on the rail.

Fragile arms stretched out, to catch the wind and sail.

Stunned, they stood in disbelief and watched the horrific show, as the churning, vicious water pulled her down below.

In the crisp, blue autumn sky
The sun cast a brilliant glow
Upon the trembling rusty bridge
And the laughing water below.

November Coffeehouse- A success!

By: Carol Boyle

Voice Writer

Jazz guitarists, Bill and Jeanette Huber, performed, par-execellence, at the Bridge Coffee House Saturday evening.

The couple performed in, what can only be named the "Huber" style, that area guitar enthuiasts recognize and love.

A standing room only crowd attended Saturday's event.

Judy Rock of Summerville presented a number of her poems. The words reached you with meaning.

Ms. Rock spoke with life when she introduced her works. As she continued her reading, her voice became more antimated, and her poetry became more alive.

Kay Fineran-Luthin of Clarion was the second poet on the evening's program.

She presented her works in a friendly, familiar way, and spoke of things to which we all can relate.

She spoke of sepia tinted photos of those long gone, of the advent of Locust in a young life, and of her family and 17 sets of twins.

Her poetry was fresh and alive.

Concluding the evening was a vocal presentation of Irish and Scottish folk songs presented by John Hogle.

Hogle delighted the audience with his talent. He presented wonderful old tales of common country life using the fife and drum as his only accompaniment.

A great evening, all told.

December 10 is the next Bridge Coffeehouse in Franklin.

A Little About Rich And A Lot About Diversity

By: Peg VanHorn Voice Writer

Rich Snow, head librarian at the campus library, had a little to say about himself during our interview the other day, but had a LOT to say about his work on the Venango Campus Diversity Committee.

Here's a little about Rich!

Rich has a bachelor of arts degree in French from Kent State University, and a masters of library science degree from Florida State University. After graduation, Rich worked at South Carolina Converse College. His wife, Betty, was his next door neighbor in South Carolina; she is a Spanish teacher at Cranberry High School. Rich says he is addicted to his computer and works on it nonstop when he is at home.

Here's a LOT about Rich's work with the Venango Campus Diversity Committee!

Committee members, Rich, Dr. Carie Forden, Dr. Phil Terman, and Kay King, counselor are working to increase awareness and appreciation of diversity on campus. They are responsible for the Suhr Hall exhibits featuring the 1994 Chinese New Year, the Holocaust and the Native American displays. This committee made arrangements for the diversity workshop and the Washington Sisters' performance held on campus in September.

The committee's next display will focus on Kwanza, an African American group formed in the 1960's to celebrate the culture and cooking of Africa. The committee is working with the CUP Diversity Committee and International Students Organization to foster interaction between campuses. (The CUP International Students will attend this year's ALO Thanksgiving dinner at Rhoades.)

One way each of us can become more aware of the customs and beliefs of other cultures and to appreciate diversity, is to read about it. Here is a list of the new titles available at the campus library:

CHINESE
All The Tea in China
Between Heaven And Earth: A Guide to Chinese Medicine
Core of Chinese Classical Fiction
Fun With Chinese Festivals
Joy Luck Club
Life And Death in Shanghai
Love Must Not be Forgotten
Mooncakes And Hungry Ghosts
Two Years in The Melting Pot

HOLOCAUST
Atlas of The Holocaust
Jewish Folktales
Dawn Night
The Diary of Anne Frank
In Kindling Flames
Jewish Folktales
Jewish Book of Why
Schindler's List
The War Against The Jews

NATIVE AMERICANS (These books will not be available until the display is dismantled.)
Blood of The Land
Crown of Columbus
Fictional Paths to Understanding
Give Back
Growing up Native American
Harper's Anthology of 20th Century Native American Poetry
The Indian Way
Iroquois Stories
Lakota Women
Lost Tribes And Promised Lands
Story Earth
Ways of Indian Wisdom

KWANZA (These books will not be available until after displayed.)
Autobiography of Malcolm X
Black Women's Health Book
Crossing The Danger Water
Kwanza: A Celebration of Culture & Cooking
Masterpieces of African American Literature Race Matters
Sister Outsider
Sisterfire
Song of Solomon
Struggle is My Life
Talking Back, Thinking Feminist, Thinking Black

Rich may have little to say about himself, but what he says about his interest in diversity sure tells us a lot about him! (The Diversity Committee still has an opening for a student member. Please see one of the committee members if you are interested.)

Smoking Issue Still Unresolved

Following A November 15 meeting with Clarion president, Diane Reinhard, the study moves forward concerning the smoking issue.

Dr. Reinhard indicated to Venango student senate members that she was unaware no smoking signs had been placed around Venango Campus.

Gayle Downey and Chris Gaisford informed Reinhard that the issue is controversial and many students have indicated that a smoking area available on Campus is greatly needed.

The senate has invited Dr. Grunenwald to hold an open forum on the subject, but he has asked that students stop in his office to discuss the matter.

The ventilation expert who was to come to Campus, still has not arrived, the women told Reinhard.

Further investigation is going forward into selecting a smoking area on the campus.

Letters to the editors of the Voice are still being accepted on this subject. Anyone wishing to express an opinion is welcome to send them to the Voice mailbox in Frame Hall.

Parking Issue Still Priority

Among the issues discussed recently by Student senate members with Dr. Reinhard, was the parking situation on Venango Campus.

Parking spaces are often at a premium on good days, Gayle Downey and Chris Gaisford told Dr. Reinhard. When the snow flys, the piles of snow flakes can take up as many as ten spaces, the women explained.

To deal with the current problem, and to discuss the possibility of adding more lots to the Campus, Jay Blondheim was appointed to the Main Campus parking committee.

Write-Inn Consultants Needed

* Do you enjoy helping people?
* Do you have a B or better in English 111?
* Are you free Monday's from 1- 2pm in the Spring term?

Congratulations. You qualify for English 270, training of Tutors for Writing Center Conferences, 1 credit.

We meet once/week and you'll tutor two hours/week of your choice. Everyone in English 270 likes people and also enjoys writing, so you'll enjoy the work. We train you, and you're not a "little English teacher" but rather a consultant, listening to student papers, asking the questions you wished someone had asked you.

English 270 tells future employers that you're good with writing and with people: what could be better than that. If you're still not sure, stop at the Write-Inn, 105 Frame and ask the current tutors.

It is a great place to develop new ideas for your own writing. There are great personal rewards in watching others writing skills grow.

All you need to do now is see Dr. Huber in room 104 Suhr to enroll.

Hurry: class size is limited.

Tying-Up First Semester

With finals just around the corner, are you busy tying-up the loose and frazzled ends of the first semester? Here's a check list to help.

1. Read over notes for final exams.
2. Finish typing term paper.
3. Return books to library.
4. Keep scheduled appointment at Career Center.

YIKES! Ah-Oh! Did you forget about that Career Center visit, to fulfill a class assignment or earn extra credit?

You can still sign up today, for one of the last appointments available on December 13 or 14.

Do not start Spring Semester all tied up in the "nots" and "should-haves" of an unfinished Fall Term. Call Cindy Jarzab, ext.272, TODAY.

By Peggy VanHorn

Bunny Green -

Bunny is an accounting major, who decided to go back to school so that she would be able to support her family. Bunny and her son, Paul, age 5, live in Oil City.

Bunny used to work at the cash office of the Sands Hotel Casino in Atlantic City, taking receipts from the floor and restaurant. Bunny remembers that at about 4:00 am every night, one individual would cash a check for $4,000 to gamble! While working at the casino, Bunny met Mike Tyson, Cher, Howie Mandel and Taylor Dayne.

Bunny says that the contrast between Atlantic City's boardwalk and the slums just blocks away is amazing. (Bunny moved to Oil City because it was a better place to raise a child.)

In addition to her work at the casinos, Bunny has been a waitress, bartender and department store cashier. She chose the accounting field because it offers her the choice of working for someone else or being self-employed.

It sounds like Bunny is going to hedge her bets for the future!

Sandra Stevenson -

Sandra is a business student, who decided to return to school to advance her education. She has two children, Adam, age 11 and Angela, age 13.

Sandra has worked at a convenience store and at a state school for the mentally retarded in New York. While working at the state school, Sandra cared for fourteen boys, helping them get ready for meals, clean up and do their laundry. Sandra liked to take her clients to the movies, to dances and ball games.

Sandra is half Chippewa Indian and is registered with the Bureau of Indian Affairs. This entitles Sandra to school grants and to get restitution from the United States for stolen reservation land.

When Sandra was fifteen, she and her mother visited the ancestral reservation in Montana. One place of particular interest was Devil's Kitchen. This dwelling is carved in the side of a mountain about 100 to 200 feet above ground and is accessed by climbing a rope ladder. There is an oven, pantry, table and two sets of triple bunk beds carved in stone.

Sandra's plans to advance her education should be fortified by her hardy lineage.

Barbara Kazmarek -

Barb is a business administration and accounting major. She and her husband, James, have four children: Kimberly, age 19, a freshman at IUP, Autumn, 18, Steve, 17 and Cali 9.

Barb decided to return to work as a bank teller when the children got older. When she could not find a job, she decided to return to college. As luck would have it, Barb was hired by Mellon Bank the first day of pre-session classes!

Besides Barb's full time studies, part time job and four children, she and her husband, James, operate JFK Sporting Goods out of their New Bethlehem home and have a beef cattle farm. (James works full time as a Public Utilities Commission enforcement officer as well!)

Before moving to the New Bethlehem area, Barb and James were part owners of the Mt. Pocono Airport. (They used to fly to Allentown for a coke.)

Barb, this writer is exhausted just writing about your activities!

Roberta Schroeder -

Roberta is a psychology major, who was working a low-paying, dead end job, when she discovered that she had breast cancer. She decided, "If I can get through that (cancer treatments), I can get through school!" and returned to college.

Roberta has two children, James, age 18, and Hillary, age 16.

Breast cancer is not the only life-altering occurrence that Roberta has experienced. She recently married Hillary's father, Marty, who she had not seen for nearly fourteen years.

This reunion was the result

of Hillary's curiosity about her father. Using tips from a story on the Oprah Winfrey Show, Roberta started a search and located Marty's sister in New York.

Hillary and Roberta both wrote to Marty in care of his sister. Marty called his sister on Mother's Day and learned of the letters. This was the beginning of daily telephone calls between Marty and Roberta.

A meeting between Hillary and her father was planned for May 14, Hillary's sixteenth birthday. Marty hitchhiked and walked from New York to Warren, where Roberta and Hillary picked him up. (He left at 8:30 am and arrived at 9:00 pm.)

Roberta says that when father and daughter met, it was like they had never been separated. They hugged, kissed, cried and held hands all the way home!

Roberta and Marty were married in August, Hillary was maid of honor and James was best man. Roberta says, "Everything has come full circle, like it was meant to be!"

Carol Boyle -

Carol is a psychology major with an English minor. She decided to return to school to complete her degree because her children were getting older and leaving home and she wanted to have something to do with her life. Carol's goal is to write. She would like to continue her studies and earn a masters degree in English.

She has three children, a son, Kimball, age 28, who is a promotion manager for Van Shoe Company in California; Matt, age 18, a freshman at Denison University in Ohio, and Kate, age 17. Carol's husband, Pat, is the publisher of the Oil City Derrick.

Carol enjoys painting with water colors and likes to spend time in the summer at Chautauqua, a religious, social, cultural colony in New York.

Carol has bred and raised Arabian horses and still owns twelve horses.

Carol admits that when she returned to school last year she was very frightened. Now that she has completed almost three semesters, she says she is "in the swing of things." Besides being a full time student, she is co-editor of the Venango Voice.

Grenci's Locker Room

Even before he became the oldest heavy weight champion in history, Goerge Forman was a hero of mine, and probably my favorite personality. I have followed his career since the '70's, and there are many things about him that intrigue me.

To begin with, when he was the heavyweight champion in the '70's, he was not a very likeable guy, and admitted that he would not have been averse to literally killing his opponent. (cont.)

after loosing his crown to Muhammad Ali, his career was never the same. After a loss to Jimmy Young in 1977 he claimed to have had a religious experience and retired.

He stated that he "died" in his training room after the fight and, "the smell of death was around for weeks." But then he was reborn, he became a preacher.

Ten years later he returned to the ring. Not many people took him seriously. He fought courageously against Evander Hollyfield about three years ago for the championship but lost. Just about everybody firgured it was his "last Hurrah."

Before fighting Michael Moorer I told people he had a good chance of beating him...most figured he didn't have much of a chance. One astute boxing fan said it was hard for him to see Forman winning because aging fighters before him had tried and failed.

When Joe Louis was in his late thirties he fought Rocky Marciano, and looked like a shell of his former self. Ditto for Muhammad Ali when he fought Larry Holmes in '80. But to me there was always something different about Foreman.

He had fought a few times within the last few years, and although he did not win all of them, he didn't embarrass himself.

What Employer's Look For.

A review by Bill Gaisford

Do you have what it takes to get a job in today's job market? You might be surprised by some of the things prospective employers look for.

A panel of three recent Venango Campus graduates shared their job hunting experiences with students attending the luncheon-lecture in Rhoades Hall. All three speakers stressed the importance of becoming involved in community and campus activities as well as planning now for marketable job qualities.

Kris Gaisford, a '94 graduate with an Associate degree in nursing, is currently working as an R.N. in the Critical Care Unit of Metro Health Center in Erie. She said ''Employers want to see commitment and involvement.''

George Ekis agreed with Gaisford, saying that ''getting involved in outside activities shows your willingness to participate and learn.'' Ekis is also a `94 graduate with an Associate degree in Nursing and an Associate degree in Business management.

According to Ekis, if an employer is choosing between two applicants, the one that can list extracurricular activities is more likely to be hired. ''When they say 'Tell me about yourself', you have to have something to tell.''

When asked which classes he felt were most beneficial in getting a job, Ekis stated ''Speech and Math. Nobody likes every class, but these are important.''

Pat Zook also felt that Speech was one of her most important classes. Zook, who graduated recently with an Associate degree in Business Management and a Bachelors in Industrial relations, felt that being able to speak and articulate ideas is key to ''selling'' yourself to an employer.

Zook said the skills she uses most are communication and computer. ''This is a computer age and employers want to know what kind of computer experience you have. You should keep a list of the types of computers and the programs that you are familiar with.'' Don't go to an interview unprepared!

"The diversity of your resume is important to getting hired.'' Zook said. ''If your focus is too narrow, it can work against you. Employers are looking for flexible people with a broad range of interests and educational experience. Don't take too many classes in the same area.''

Zook added that education is an ongoing experience. ''A degree is not a ticket to a job, it is the foundation for what you will learn on the job.''

The consensus of the speakers was that 1) A 4.0 QPA is not as important as a list of extracurricular activities. 2) Take a wide variety of courses. 3) Get letters of recommendation from department heads before you graduate.

Frank Clark
A Homage In Prose

By Stevette Wood

I spoke with him for a minute today. This special person, educator and advisor, will be leaving our institution soon. The home of the eagle is permanent for none of us. Frank is the epitome of Clarion University. A handsome, silver haired man, polished and learned. He offered refinement to each of us, never wanting to mutate us into a specific mold. I watched each of us in Speech class, his students, develop under his care. The timid and insecure developed the articulate ability to verbally shine in front of others without stuttering, turning hues of red or vibrating the podium they held in front of them as they spoke. Others were like me, bold and not fainthearted over the thought of public speaking, yet no longer satisfied with mediocre, we strove for perfection and accuracy under his lessons. "Slow down your speech, Stevette, articulate." I feel it a very fortuitous experience to have been in his nest. We said goodbye as the red maple leaves clustered and blew away like geese flying south.

CLARION PROFESSOR GETS "BLACK ACHIEVER" AWARD

Dr. Davie Tate Jr., professor of education at Clarion University of PA, recently was named "Outstanding Black Achiever," by Black Opinion Magazine. The award ceremony was held recently, during a luncheon in Pittsburgh.

Dr. Tate was nominated for the award by John Shropshire, dean of admissions at Clarion University of PA.

The award is based on dedication, commitment to excellence, positive role models, and self pride and integrity.

Dr. Tate has earned five degrees and is an active member of the Association of Teachers Educators; the Ohio State Bar Association; the Columbus, Ohio Bar Association; the National Bar Association; the National Conference of Black Lawyers; the Association for Supervisors and Curriculum Development; Phi Delta Kappa; the National Congress of Black Faculty; and the Pennsylvania Black Conference on Higher Education.

In his acceptance speech, Tate said, "I stand tall because I stand on the shoulders of so many other people-family, colleagues and friends. I can't fall because they are always there to catch me and to keep me moving forward.

As an attorney/advocate for the homeless, Dr. Tate has worked in an experimental program for the Columbus Bar Association and the Columbus, Ohio Legal Aid Society, since 1989. The program offers legal services for civil and criminal proceedings in selected homeless shelters in the Columbus area. Tate and other lawyers volunteer to work in these shelters on a rotating basis.

This past summer, Dr. Tate participated in a Habitat for Humanity Project, sponsored by the American Bar Association, where attorneys built a house for a homeless family in New Orleans, LA.

"This is the kind of thing that is contagious," says Tate about his volunteer projects. "You help someone and they help someone else. That is what it is all about."

NEW MINOR OFFERED

A new minor, Ancient Mediterranean Studies, is being offered for the Spring 1995 semester, at Main Campus.

Ancient Mediterranean Studies will explore the political and philosophical ideals that influence modern society.

Back To Your Future Night Well Attended

Fifty-three area residents took part in the January 5, Back To Your Future, program, according to Dave Katis, Venango Campus Admissions Director.

Representing the campus student body were Kristy Flockerzi, Lisa Knight and Louisa Striver. These three spoke of the problems and rewards of the returning student.

The evening provided information for financial aid opportunities, application processes, scholarship information, career placement, daycare services and the associate degrees offered at Venango Campus.

At press time, 15 applications had already been returned to Katis.

Environmental Geoscience Program Planned At CUP

The beginning steps have begun for the development of a series of courses in Environmental/ Geoscience, according to the department of geography and earth science at Clarion University.

Dr. Anthony Vega, assistant professor of geography/earth science, announced the following courses to be introduced during the 1995-96 school year: Climatology in Environmental Analysis, Air Pollution Meteorology, and Field Methods in Environmental Geoscience.

The proposed program was presented in December. It must be approved by the State System of Higher Education and the Clarion University Council of Trustees.

The proposed program is not available at most universities, according to Vega.

This addition will allow students the ability to become an environmental analyst.

Professional Voice Care Program Set At Clarion Campus

Using your voice professionally as a teacher, coach, singer, actor or a radio or television broadcaster, is going to make a strain on it. Clarion University now has a program to help students in the "Care and Use of the Professional Voice."

The program, now in its third year, educates individuals in the efficient and effective vocal use.

According to Mary Pat McCarthy, instructor of speech pathology and audiology, "we are looking to educate people in education, music, broadcasting, coaching and other fields, where vocal misuse places the individual at risk for developing persistent voice problems."

A non-instrumental evaluation of the individual's voice is given at the inception of the program. Five to six one hour sessions will follow.

Covered in the instruction is vocal hygiene, what environmental irritants are problems, and how to develop a personalized voice program.

Although the program is not for credit, a certificate, which can be added to your resume, is given at the completion of the program.

Over forty students are currently enrolled in the program.

Paralegal, Nursing- Listed As "Hot Careers"

Degrees for four of the top ten national "hot careers" are available at Clarion University, and two of them are available exclusively at Venango Campus. Information concerning 250 occupations is published in the "Occupational Outlook Handbook," and according to the office at Clarion, it provides information necessary for careers such as papalegals (86 percent national growth rate), special education teachers (74 percent), psychologists (48 percent), and registered nurses (42 percent).

The paralegal program is five years into its existence. The student earns an associate of science degree in legal business and studies.

This prepares a student for assisting lawyers and their clients in law offices, in courts or in governmental institutions. In addition, when authorized to do so by administrative, statutory or court authority, a graduate may operate as an independent contractor.

A legal assistant is capable of representing clients at many administrative hearings.

Clarion University offers degrees in several types of nursing, including preparation to take the registered licensing examination. According to Dr. Audean Duespohl, dean of the school of nursing, "Our enrollment is exceptional."

In addition to the bachelor of science degree in nursing, RN program, the school also offers an associate of science in nursing (ASN) and a bachelor of science in nursing (BSN) degrees.

The hot careers list also rates physical therapists, at number two, with an 88 percent projected growth, and veterinary-care technician, at number 10, with a 38 percent projected growth. Although these degrees are not currently available at Clarion, the fields can be entered through the biology degree program.

Who's Who....

The Benefactors of Venango Campus

Classes are in full swing on campus and most of us have already taken care of some administrative work or used the computer lab at Frame, bought books or had lunch at Rhoades, stopped by the Learning Center or attended a class in Montgomery or borrowed a book from the Suhr Library.

Richard C. Frame Hall, Robert W. Rhoades Center, (J.G.) Montgomery Hall and the Charles L. Suhr Library - names of campus buildings, right? More importantly, they commemorate the visionaries who established Venango Campus of Clarion University in the early 60's. These leaders along with 2,300 local citizens and businesses, donated time and money for a branch campus in Oil City. Who were these men whose names adorn our buildings?

Senator Richard C. Frame

Senator Richard C. Frame was the prime sponsor of the legislation supporting the creation of Venango Campus. (This was the first time in history that a state college in Pennsylvania set up an off-campus operation.)

Frame was born in Franklin in 1926. After graduating from Yale University and the University of Virginia Law School, he opened a law office in Franklin.

He started his newspaper career as state circulation supervisor for Curtis Publishing Com-

He served as solicitor for several townships and school boards in Venango County, was on the board of directors of several banks, the Venango County Industrial Development Corporation, the Red Cross, the Rotary Club and the Y.M.C.A. He was president of the Franklin Area Chamber of Commerce and the Franklin Club.

Frame was the Venango County Republican Party chairman from 1956-1968 and in 1962, was elected to the state Senate, serving 5 terms.

In addition to the legislation for Venango Campus, Frame sponsored the Clean Streams Act of 1965 and the state Public Employee Bargaining Act 195.

Senator Frame died in an airplane crash in 1977 at the age of 50.

Robert W. Rhoades

The formation of a of a local campus in Oil City was the special project of the Oil City Chamber of Commerce. One of the campus project's prime movers was Robert W. Rhoades, Chamber president.

Rhoades was born in 1912 and graduated from Oil City High School. He completed a business administration course at New York University and attended Columbia University.

Rhoades then joined The Derrick Publishing Company, where he held the positions of circulation manager, manager of circulation and advertising and executive vice president, as well as general manager of Venango Newspapers.

In addition to his role in establishing Venango Campus, Rhoades was a member and treasurer of the original board of the Oil City General Authority which was created to finance and construct the sewage disposal system. He also helped develop several downtown parking lots and served as the first chairman of the Oil City Parking Authority.

Rhoades was a board member of the Oil City Hospital, president of the Oil City Lions Club, a member, director and first vice president of the Oil City Club and president of Venango County Industrial Development Corporation.

He was director of the Venango Campus and was appointed by Gov. Raymond P. Shafer to the board of trustees of Clarion State College.

Mr. Rhoades died in 1967 at the age of 54.

J. G. Montgomery

J. G. ''Monty'' Montgomery served as president of Venango Campus, Inc., the non-profit corporation which held title to the land and buildings on campus before legislation was approved to make it state property.

Montgomery was born in 1896. He attended Kane High School and West Virginia University. He received his bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering and a masters of science degree in mining engineering.

Montgomery worked in the gas utility industry for 36 years, first as a geologist, then superintendent of production and transmission, then director, vice president and finally president of three utility companies including what is now known as National Fuel Gas.

Montgomery was vice president of the Oil City Area Chamber of Commerce, president of the Oil City Hospital Board and president of the Oil City Rotary Club. He was a board and charter member of the Oil City Club, vice president of the Oil City Community Playhouse, president of the Oil City Development Corporation and board member of the Venango County Industrial Development Corporation.

In 1965, Montgomery was the recipient of the Golden Deed Award.

Besides his business and civic interests, Montgomery was an avid square dancer. He was officer and director of the Allegheny Valley Square Dance Federation and a member of various dance clubs.

Mr. Montgomery died in 1985 at the age of 86.

Direct equal opportunity inquiries to Assistnat to the President for Social Equity, Clarion University of PA, 216 Carrier Administration Building, Clarion, PA 16214-1232, (814) 226-2000.

Charles L. Suhr

As co-chairman of the Venango Campus Campaign Advisory Committee, Charles L. Suhr led the campaign to finance a branch college in Oil City.

Suhr was born in Oil City in 1877. He was a pioneer in the oil industry serving as an employee or as a board member of Pennzoil for 72 years. Suhr began his oil industry career as a stenographer, shipping clerk and pipefitter's helper. He took a 2 year leave of absence from the refinery to study chemistry at Philadelphia College of Pharmacy. He returned to work as a refinery superintendent and went on to become president and chairman of the board of Pennzoil.

Suhr held the positions of trustee, first vice president, executive vice president and president of the National Petroleum Association, Chairman of the Board of the First Seneca Bank and Trust Company, and first president and one of the founders of the Oil City Club.

He served several terms as director of the Oil City Chamber of Commerce and the Oil City Community Fund, was chairman of the Drake Well Memorial Park Foundation, chairman of the War Chest Committee of World War I, and a trustee of the Y.M.C.A.

In 1950, he was honored by the Exchange Club of Oil City by being named its first recipient of the Golden Deed Award.

Mr. Suhr died in 1970 at the age of 92.

Montgomery Hall Has IT All

Remember way back to 1994 when you received a letter telling you about all of the "New & Free" things that are available to you as a Venango student?

Remember how very busy you were and just didn't have time to schedule an appointment?

You can still schedule. Why not do it now, before the semester gets too crazy?

Ways To Get Better Grades

Good Grades and a healthy QPA do not magically appear on your record. Let's face it, there is a lot of old fashioned hard work involved.

However, there are ways to get better grades without wearing yourself down.

At the learning center in Montgomery Hall, we can help, by showing you fast and efficient ways to get the most out of your study time.

There is no hocus pocus, just solid advice.

Call ext. 283 today, for your appointment.

Reading Vs. Interaction

Are you reading and reading and rereading and still not able to remember what you read?

Research indicates that just reading is an inefficient way to study.

You need to interact with what you are reading in order to boost your retention rate.

Interaction occurs when you question, recite, highlight or underline, or create concept webs about the material you are reading.

What is a concept web? A concept web is a visualization of the material which you are studying.

At the learning Skills Center, in Montgomery Hall, we can help you learn how to interact with your textbooks, so that the effort you put into your reading adds up to better retention, which equates to better grades.

What is Your Best Way To Learn?

Everyone learns in their own way. Some learn best by hearing things. Others need to "See" things drawn out for them.

Many students learn best by doing; rewriting notes, doing labs, typing study guides, etc. Actually, we all learn in each of these ways.

But, what is the dominate way in which we best learn?

Your job, as a student, is to learn which way you can learn material best, then maximize on that strength. (cont.)

What can you do to resolve conflicts?

• Start talking! If there is a wall of silence between two people in a conflict, nothing can be resolved.

• Take it outside. Sometimes its much easier to discuss things if you aren't in the office. Pull the other person out to the hall, take him or her to coffee, anything. It can be very helpful to have a change of scene.

• Acknowledge the other side's point of view. Don't sell anybody short by not listening.

• Be willing to compromise with the other person. After all, the conflict is probably doing damage to the entire office staff. ■

By Peg VanHorn, Voice Writer

Dean Duespohl, An Inspiration

Dr. T. Audean Duespohl

In 1972, the first class of associate degree nurses graduated from Venango Campus of Clarion State College. At that time, Venango was the only branch campus of a state college to offer a two year degree program.

Dr. T. Audean Duespohl was one of the instructors of the class of 1972 and helped to develop the initial nursing curriculum. Today, Dr. Duespohl is Dean of the School of Nursing.

Dr. Duespohl started her nursing career as a diploma graduate of the Oil City School of Nursing, which was associated with the former Oil City Hospital.

After working for one year, she went to college, earning a baccalaureate degree in nursing from the University of Pittsburgh, Titusville. She taught nursing for four years at Hamot in Erie, while earning a masters, in guidance and counseling, from Edinboro University.

In 1970, Duespohl was invited to Venango Campus to teach those first associate degree nurses. While working full time in Oil City, she commuted to the University of Buffalo to earn a masters degree in nursing ,with a major in child health.

In 1972, Dr. Duespohl was elected to the department chair. She was appointed director of the Division of Nursing in 1982, and then Dean of the School of Nursing in 1986.

Duespohl earned her doctorate degree at the University of Pittsburgh in 1989. (At this time, Dr. Duespohl was living in Pittsbrugh and commuting daily to Oil City and Clarion.)

Duespohl is the author of three books, Nursing In Tran-sition, Nursing Diagnosis and A Guide For Effective Clinical Instruction. She has a private practice as a psychosocial therapist for children and adults working with Partners in Care, Pam Lawrence and Associates.

By offering an associates degree in nursing at a branch campus, Clarion was a pioneer in Pennsylvania during the 70's.

Today, Dr. Duespohol is leading the way for the state graduate nursing education programs.

As the state system coordinator of Health Care Enhancement Initiatives, she is working with all 14 universities in providing primary health care to the under served people in Pennsylvania.

Just recently, the Pennsylvania State System of Universities approved a masters level program for nursing practitioners, as a joint effort of Clarion and Slippery Rock Universities. Nurse practitioners could provide primary care in collaboration with a physician.

Another new dimension to Clarion University, according to Dr. Duespohl, is its Pittsburgh site. Approximately 150 baccalaureate nursing students and 150 general education students, at the West Penn Hospital School of Nursing ,are earning Clarion credits.

Duespohl On Nursing

While the Pittsburgh students earn Clarion credits from afar, Clarion University is adding yet another new dimension-distance learning technology.

The infamous information highway will connect our campus to the Clarion campus via telecommunications.

Video computers and the telephone system will enable students in Oil City and students in Clarion to attend the same class without leaving their respective campuses.

An experimental session of this technology is scheduled for mid -February, when Deans Duespohl and Grunenwald will "attend" a meeting of deans at the main campus, while remaining at Venango.

Dr. Duespohl and her husband, Terry, now live in the Oil City area. Mr. Duespohl is a business instructor at Clarion, main campus, and he teaches Applications of Supervision at Venango Campus on Wednesday nights.

They have a foster daughter from Turkey, who lived with them as an AFS student for one year, then returned later to stay. Fulay is near completion of her masters degree in business management and accounting at Indiana University.

Dr. Duespohl can be considered a pioneer of sorts in another area as well. She and her husband are starting a llama farm. The first llamas will arrive in march.

According to Dr. Duespohl, llamas make excellent pets and are the pack animals of choice, because their hooves do not destroy the environment. "These gentle animals are being used as golf course caddies and are approved as 4-H pets," says Dr. Duespohl.

In closing, Dr. Duespohl reflects, "nursing is a versatile profession." As a nurse, educator, administrator, author, wife, foster mother, and soon to be llama farmer, versatile is a good description for Dr. Duespohl, too!

The Oil City Review

The regions literary journal will present a performance/reading of some of its published writers at the Franklin Public Library, on Thursday night, 7:00 pm.

An open reading will follow for those interested in sharing their work.

Admission is free.

Also, the Oil City Review is still accepting submissions of poetry, fiction, non-fiction and artwork. All submissions should be sent to Dr. Philip Terman, CUP at Venango Campus, Oil City, PA

Child Care Center To Open

The University Child Development Center (the new daycare center) is scheduled to be open by the end of February.

A representative from the Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare will inspect the center, tentatively on February 15.

Once the center receives its license, it will be open for business.

Employees have been working diligently to turn two bare classrooms, at the Venango Christian High School, into a vibrantly colored, child-centered, atmosphere.

Equipped with top-of- the-line furnishings, toys and supplies, the center is taking on a whole new attitude, according to center officials.

Please check The Voice, next week, for an up date on Center activities.

An Open House will soon be held, and opening day festivities are being planned.

Don't delay in registering, if you are planning to have your children be a part of the new Center.

The Cook-In/Games Night held in Rhoades last Friday was a success. Sandy was chief flipper at the grill while others watched through the glass in anticipation.

Inside, the gym was open and being used by children and adults alike. There were table games, pool, ping-pong,dancing to MTV and a boom-box and a game of tag.

Coming March 31, our Cook-In is a "Sprang Flang".

We quietly made requests for them last semester, and they finally appeared.
Unfortunately, they have disappeared again.

The Day

(Editor's Note: This poem was one written by Mary Swander, nationally acclaimed poet and author, who read her work Saturday evening, at the Bridge Coffeehouse in Franklin.)

The Day you have to stay on the other side of the fence, teat and milk still in sight, brimful, hanging from the belly of your nanny. How lovely her blue fur, brown eyes, ears stiff and white, flicking flies.
How perfect the curl of her tail, the sharp tips of her horns, the split of her hooves.
How you can still feel your head butting her bag to start the flow, then how everything moves, tongue pressed against skin, mouth tilting up and up again. The day began the same with sun and corn, the rooster's crow, a quick leap from the woodpile, but one look into that water pail was enough, your own face blurring. This is it, kid, your grown, teeth too big for baby stuff. So quit your moans and peek through the slats at the wild grape just a neck stretch within reach.
What you don't know, what you don't know.

??????? !#X!#X! The Write Inn

By Peg VanHorn
Voice Writer

Do you groan when your instructor says, "Write a two page paper on....?" Do your ideas seem to vanish when you stare at that blank white paper?

The Write-Inn in Room 105 Frame Hall, is the place for you.

This peer tutoring program is manned by fellow students who enjoy writing.

One of the Write-Inn tutors, Dave Burnett, started creating short stories before he could write; he dictated his tales to his older sister.

As a sophomore, majoring in anthropology, Dave plans to earn his PH.D in archeology and to continue to write. Eventually, he would like to support himself with his writing.

Dave is an editor for the Oil City Review, has read some of his work at the Bridge Coffeehouse, and has sold one of his short stories.

Dave credits the peer tutoring technique, in Dr. Phil Terman's creative writing class last term, with helping him to see things in the mechanics of his writing that he had not seen before.

After that class, he could see a big change in his writing.

Dave tutors 10 hours a week, at the Write-Inn, as a work study student. His hours are: Tuesday, 2:30pm-4:30pm, Wednesday, 10:00am-1:30 pm, and Thursday, 12:00-4:30pm.

Another Write-Inn tutor, Lee Masters, says, "When I grow up, I would like to write and illustrate children's books."

Her interest in writing grew to include children's tales, when she created oral stories for her daughter; Hannah, when they lived in a tipi (Lee hauled water from a nearby stream, grew and canned her own vegetables, made Hannah's baby food and cooked over a wood burner. Lee says that nothing wakes you up on a cold winter morning like a bucket shower down by the river.

Lee has two poems published and is co-editor of the Venango Voice. She is in her second year of college and plans to earn a bachelor's degree and become a CPA.

Lee, her boyfriend and Hannah now live near Franklin in an underground home. There is a garden on the roof, and Lee says that it is really strange to be sitting in the living room when someone is mowing the grass.

Lee is a Write-Inn tutor for credit. Her hours are 11:00 am to 1:00 pm, Tuesdays.

Pam Evans discovered that writing for Dr. Terman's US literature class, last semester, complemented her nursing classes. In addition to her nursing journal, Pam keeps a writing journal and a personal journal.

After graduation in "94" days, Pam plans to earn both a bachelor's and master's degree in nursing and would eventually like to teach.

Pam is working at the Write-Inn for credit. Her hours are 11:00 am to 1:00 pm Mondays.

Whether its the mechanics of writing, storytelling, journaling, or putting those first words on that blank page, the Write-Inn is a good place to start.

Parking Complaint Voiced

A student, who had purchased and displayed a parking permit, complained recently that he could not find a legal parking space during regular class hours.

He also noted that there were several vehicles in the student lots without a permit displayed. These vehicles, without a parking permit, were given tickets.

If students with valid permits find this same situation, please notify the Parking Committee through the Frame Office.

If students illegally using spaces are charged for parking on campus via parking tickets, they may decide it is cheaper to park off campus or purchase a permit.

This may open up some parking spaces, or at least they will be used by vehicles displaying permits.

A Note From An Editor By Lee Masters

I do not like to take advantage of my access to this paper, by putting my two cents in all the time, and I don't.

Today, however, I feel like spewing forth a word or two. It may be PMS or the full moon or the fact that I am on the front page of the paper.

It has come to my attention that a new math course is going to be offered in the fall of 1995, at Clarion, called Math 010. It will cover basic elementary math skills of addition, subtraction, multiplication, division and hopefully other math facts.

Lets figure here. If I were to start my college education again in 1995, I would have to take Math 010, 100, and 110 before I could take the math I am required, (Math 131 any body?), put up the bucks for three courses and probably an extra semester or two, all to go over what was taught in high school.

I took the math placement test. What a joke. 95% of the students taking the test looked at the test and left. I answered a few problems but ended up in Math 100. There I spent a semester reviewing all of high school algebra, little of which was on the placement test. Now I'm taking Math 110. Oh boy! Now I get to review Math 100. I sure hate spending all this money for naught.

I don't want these classes for my electives and I don't want to graduate with 200 credits in 5 years, in debt with student loans, because I had to take all this math when I just wanted Math 131.

I didn't need a math prerequisite for my accounting classes. That made no sense. We use formulas and the old add and subtract technique continually.

I can understand why an extensive mathematics background should be required for virtually all bachelor degrees, but the associate degree math requirement of Math 131, arguably, appears overly demanding.

Now I'm running out of steam and paper, with still a lot on my mind. One of which is editing this story of content and grammar. I should have gone to the Write Inn.

Psychic Helps Audience See Powers

The telephone rings. You know who is calling without picking up the receiver. Or, you sense without answering that the news will be bad. Coincidences ... or psychic ability?

Kasandra, a psychic who spoke to a group of about 80 people at Rhoades Center in February, suggests that each of us has psychic ability, but not all of us are tuned into it. She recommends that we think of our psychic ability as we would a muscle. If we use our muscles, we develop them. If we don't use them, the muscles remain underdeveloped. We could have latent psychic ability, just waiting to be cultivated.

According to Kasandra, there is scientific evidence for psychic activity. It has been discovered that brain waves have a certain number of measurable cycles per second. During the beta cycle, for example, one experiences approximately 14-30 brain waves per second. This is the normal waking consciousness, the logical state. The brain is working too fast to have psychic flashes.

During the alpha brain wave cycle, when one is engaging in an activity that does not require a lot of logical thought, like driving the car or washing the dishes, one's brain cycle measures from 7-13 waves per second. As the mind slows down, one can experience psychic occurrences. Have you ever noticed that when you take a walk or drive the car you seem to be able to sort out a problem better than when you give it your undivided attention? You could be perceiving better because you are thinking during your alpha wave cycle.

According to Kasandra, children up to the age of 13 are particularly psychic. They are in their alpha brain wave cycle all the time. People with exceptional talent in art, music, writing, and other creative activities, are often predominantly focused in their alpha cycle, as well.

The theta brain cycle measures 3-6 waves per second. This is when one is getting into the sleep cycle. A lot of people are psychic in their dream state. Have you ever dreamt something and then it happened? If your dream is going to come true, it will most likely occur within three days reports Kasandra.

To demonstrate how each of us has some psychic potential, the seminar participants were divided into groups of ten. Each member of the group took a turn holding a sealed envelop that contained a hidden object. Each member then described the feeling perceived when the object was held between the palms of the hands. This is called psychometry - sensing the energy of the owner of the object. A member of one group said, "All I could think about was my daughter." The object in the envelope was a piece of jewelry belonging to Kim Price -- the woman's daughter!

Kasandra displayed her psychic ability by reading tarot cards. A woman in the audience randomly selected a card from the deck. Kasandra reported that the chosen card had only one meaning -something to do with moving. Yes, the woman who pulled that card is moving! Coincidence or psychic ability?

Kasandra suggests that we begin to trust our gut instinct, follow our intuition and our hunches. In other words, pay attention to our psychic ability. ''How do we know what the potential of being human really is?'' summarized Kasandra.

Let's Speak Correctly In Class

As Joan Rivers would say, "Can we talk?" We might think we can, while some of us may know very well we don't have proper speaking grammar.

We are all here to get our education, so as to get a better job. What are our chances of landing that perfect dream job, that pays the comfortable bucks, if we don't know how to communicate properly.

We have our English classes for our written grammar. Do we talk like we write? Should our teachers correct our speech, in class?

I am not opposed to being corrected in class. I am here to learn.

"Where is that assignment at, Mr Smith?" I asked. "Where is that assignment, period, is the proper way to ask that question Lee, and the answer is, page 79."

We are adult enough to learn from our mistakes if they are pointed out to us in an adult way.

Writing Centers Conference Attended

"What's the most important thing you learned?" I asked Dr. Joan Huber, who traveled to Bloomington, Indiana to give a presentation at the East Central Writing Centers Association, March 10. "That we're not the only ones," she answered. "When I'd just mention people coming in at the last minute with papers, people just rolled their eyes. Yet a lot of the tutors told about helping students with several papers, so SOME students evidently do come in plenty of time."

What is the value of going to a conference like this? "Mostly it's to get a fresh viewpoint, new ideas. The conference includes schools in Michigan, Indiana, and Ohio, as well as Pennsylvania. Tutors, as well as directors and faculty, make presentations and sit around and talk. And being on the Board, I have some voice in policy, so it's well worth the trip."

Dr. Huber said that 180 people attended the conference at Indiana University and that she's looking forward to the 1996 meeting, planned for Pittsburgh.

24th Annual James Scott II Essay Contest

College level students are invited to submit essay entries on the subject "Would a Right to Work Law in Pennsylvania Enhance Business and Individual Opportunity."

This contest is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Right To Work Defense and Education Foundation, Inc. This year's essay topic asks students to examine the economic differences that exist between states with a Right to Work law and states without such a law and to determine the effects such a law might have on enhancing business and individual opportunity in Pennsylvania.

All entries must be postmarked by Friday, April 28, 1995 and mailed to: Essay Contest, PA Right to Work Foundation, 225 State Street, Suite 300, Harrisburg, PA 17101.

As college students, looking to enter the work force in PA or another state, the research required for this essay could benefit a person two fold.

Contest rules and instructions are available in the office of Angel Muschweck, Montgomery Hall.

More About Math

by Bill Gaisford

I've been hearing a lot about a new math class lately so I decided to ask math instructor, John Grenci, what the fuss was all about.

According to Grenci, Clarion will offer a Math 010 course that will focus on basic arithmetic (such as addition, subtraction, multiplication and division), fractions, possibly some algebra, how to read a story problem and how to take notes. The course will be offered on main campus only and will not be required.

The math placement test may put you in Math 010, however the placement tests are not binding.

"For a returning adult student whose algebra skills have gone unused for years, anxiety can be a real killer. If you feel you didn't do well on the placement test because of test anxiety or some other reason, but are capable of doing the work in Math 110, you can skip Math 100. Some people end up in the Math 100 course when they should be in 110."

Grenci also stated that while some people might find Math 010 helpful, the vast majority of his students won't need it. "It (algebra) might be hard for many students, but the ones who really want to, will get through. Attitude is the key."

If you're having trouble in math, John suggests that you see him in his office, see a tutor or get together witha group of students from your class. Don't wait intil you fall behind to ask for help.

It's Spring! "Secret Garden" Dance Time

Venango Campus slates Spring Dinner Dance. Shake the wrinkles out of those party dresses and suit jackets. Its almost time.

Time to relax from the hectic school routine, socialize and dance through the night in a "Secret Garden" atmosphere.

C.A.B. will be sponsoring the annual Spring dinner dance at the Franklin Club on Friday, April 28, beginning with a 6:30 PM social hour.

The dinner hour will be from 7:30 till 9:00, when the dancing begins. Music will be provided by the group, Mercedez. They claim, "We'll drive you to dance" from 9:00 PM till 1:00 AM.

Schedule those babysitters right now, polish those wing-tips and dust off those patent leather dance shoes. The cost for students and their guest is $7 each; for faculty and staff and their guest, the cost is $11. Maybe we can afford some new shoes.

It's just about time, to take time, to smell the flowers. Think Spring.

Letter to Editor:

There is an English Proverb by John Ray that says, "He is a fool and ever shall, that writes his name upon a wall." I am a fool. I contributed my junk mail to the biology trash project. My signed garbage was blowing up against the doors to the Suhr Library building; it was tumbling down the hill toward the roadside.

I hear that someone was going to call the police and have me cited for littering. I wish you had. I should be held accountable for my mess.

I hear that the trash in our center court disturbed a lot of people. It should have. It disturbed a lot of critters, too, and the grass, and the shrubs and the pond. Who will complain for them?

It's too bad that all our trash is not signed; maybe there would be less of it. Maybe we would all feel accountable - or at least foolish.

(Earth Day is recognized in April. There will be much celebration and recognition of this day, through April 28.)

The Write Inn is a unique writing center, set up to assist students with writing, journaling, grammer and other mechanics of the writing process.

This peer tutoring program is headed by Dr. Joan Huber. If you have a liking for writing, have completed English 111 with a B or better, contact Dr. Huber to interview to join the consultants team in the Fall.

The writing of a paper is not a one step process. We need to write and revise, sometimes over and over again.

Consultant, Stevette Wood shared her definition of revision with the rest of the team at the last meeting.

Revision: It is not very ofter in life you get a chance to take back what you say, develop what you mean or get a chance to get back on track. Revision in writing empowers you. You get the chance that daily life doesn't allow.

STUDENT SENATE ELECTIONS ARE COMING

Letter From Editor:

Elections for our Student Senate, for the 1995/96 school term will be held April 24 through the April 27.

There's been a lot of coverage of the candidates for our local elections and I'm excited about that interest.

I would like to see the same amount of candidates for our senate as there are for commissioner. (Well maybe not quite as many)

We need to be active in all our governments or we lose the democracy for which we fought so hard.

Applications for Student Senate are in Rhoades or Student Services.

It could be fun and educational, with lots of speeches, active campaigning, maybe even a debate. If you need to know more about the Senate, talk to one of the Senate Members.

To All Clubs

Student Senate would like to announce that club budgets have been completed. Letters will be sent to organizations to inform them of the appropriations made and the dates for which any decision may be appealed.

Senate would like to have given each organization the entire amount they asked for, however, found this to be impossible. Many organizations asked for increases while at the same time the overall budget appropriated to Senate will remain the same for the 95/96 school year. Senate worked hard at giving each organization a fair slice of the pie.

Any club wishing to ask questions regarding the budget appropriations may do so at the time of the appeals hearing.

Gayle Downey

Bloodmobile Slated at Rhoades Gym

Time - 11AM - 5PM
Place - Rhoades Gym

The American Red Cross, in conjunction with the Student Nursing Association, invites students to an April 11 blood drive to be held at Rhoades Gym from 11 am until 5 pm.

A recent survey showed college students shocked to learn that fewer than five percent of the population donate blood. Most respondents to the American Red Cross-sponsored survey thought between 20 and 30 percent of the population donate blood.

The survey results underscore the need to intensify efforts to let people know how urgently blood is needed, not just at shortage times, but throughout the year, said Beverly H Lake, executive director of the Red Cross' Allegheny Region Chapter.

"Most people tell us they would give blood if they knew there was a need. The need is definitely there," continued Lake. In fact, almost half of the blood donated in the US is collected by the American Red Cross as part of the Red Cross commitment to immediate action emergencies. That's because, for the people who need life-saving blood, HELP CAN'T WAIT.

The Red Cross assures that it is easy to be a blood donor. Donors must meet three basic standards: be at least 17 years of age; weigh at least 110 pounds; be in good health.

The truth of the matter is that blood can come only from people who care enough to give, people who appreciate the fragile gift that we all have been blessed with--life. When we give blood, we give life to another, we offer a miracle. Giving blood is one of the simplest humanitarian acts you can perform, yet it is one whose benefit is felt for a lifetime, for there is no human need more basic than good health.

So please sign up today through any SNA member, or at the sign-up table in Rhoades Center to give the gift of life.

"It is an excellent opportunity for student to develop critical, long range language and multi-cultural skills that will definitely be advantageous to graduates in any major."

Career Employment Day Held In Rhoades

A large crowd attended the career fair held in Rhoades recently. Local business representatives set up information booths and talked with many students about prospective careers and education requirements for those jobs. Mock interviews were also held for those who wanted to get a feel for the interviewing process. The program offered students a chance to assess the job market and evaluate their educational goals.

Locally, job prospects are limited but they do exist. A few Nursing positions are still available, but the current trends in health care are forcing cutbacks in many hospitals. Home health care is one field that is growing out of those cuts. As the length of hospital stays become shorter, the need for home health care professionals will increase.

The Visiting Nurses Association expects to hire additional Nurses to fill the higher demand. Applicants should have one to two years of medical-surgical experience. As well as field and staff nurses, the VNA also employs bookkeepers, computer specialists, purchasing agents, secretaries, and speech therapists.

The Presbyterian Home of Oil City offers positions in dietary, laundry, house keeping, support services, social services, activities, and nursing. Presbyterian employs LPN's, RN's, and Nurse Aides. Many Venango Campus students earn valuable experience working part-time as nurse aides before graduation.

Both the VNA and Presbyterian Home encourage volunteers. There is always a great need for volunteers and hiring preference is given. It's a great way to get your foot in the door.

Another career field that shows some promise is the Para legal. Para legals can be employed by insurance companies, banks, law offices, or be self-employed. Self-employed para legals should consider administrative law as a specialty. Para legals can represent clients in insurance, veterans benefits, social security, workman's comp claims, etc. but cannot represent clients in a court of law. Those considering a career as a para legal should have good reading and writing skills.

Good writing skills are also necessary if you want a job at Venango Newspapers. Reporters need typing skills and should have a Journalism/ Communications degree. Reporters are not the only people employed by newspapers. The circulation department handles money and marketing while advertising deals with businesses and the community. Venango Newspapers often hire Clarion students to work as interns, gaining valuable job experience.

Internships are a great way to get summer employment in a chosen career field. A good place to look for an internship might be this school or an employment office such as Kelly Temporary Services. Kelly will assess your skills and match you with any available jobs in the area. Kelly will also assist you in finding out of town or international jobs. Although these are temporary positions, they can lead to full time if the opening becomes permanent.

The Pennsylvania Job Services office is often overlooked as a way to find internships, summer jobs, and professional civil service jobs. A state wide listing of positions available, can be found in one of the many printout lists or the regular publications from PA Job Services.

EARTH DAY EVERYDAY

Melvin Coe does his share

"It stinks!" "What a mess!" "It's gross!"
"Are we going to school in a dump?"
"They must be crazy!"
"They better pick it up!"

These and other comments were heard recently when Dr. Martha Ritter's biology students took the garbage they accumulated in one day and arranged it around campus as an Earth Day lesson.

Why did students litter campus to celebrate Earth Day? Here are some of their responses:

"The purpose of this garbage assignment was to get our attention and other's attention ..."

"... Perhaps this project will make people more conscious of their behavior in the future."

"This project was to make people realize that yes, one person can make a difference."

"... We, as the human race, can't let this (garbage pileup) continue. It will become bigger than all of us."

This year marks the 25th anniversary of Earth Day in the United States. This grass roots effort was started by professors and students who made speeches and marched on Washington, D.C. in 1970.

The group called attention to critical environmental issues such as the greenhouse effect, the depletion of the ozone, acid rain, tainted beaches, and the mountains of solid waste.

As a result of this first Earth Day, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Clean Water Acts were signed. (Good Housekeeping Magazine, April 1990)

Will the impact of looking at a littered campus for a few days change the way students look at their garbage habits? Or, will our garbage "become bigger than all of us?" The choice is ours.

(Venango Campus Earth Week will be held April 24-28. Student projects will be on display in Rhoades.)

Psychology Club Presents Workshop "A New Look at Mental Health"

The Venango Campus Psychology Club, of Clarion University, will be presenting "A New Look at Mental Health," a workshop led by Janet B Foner.

The goal of this workshop is to provide participants with an overview of the issues which affect the mental health care system, along with empowerment strategies, from the perspective of a client advocate.

Janet Foner is a community organizer and trainer of people with psychiatric labels and their allies. She has a Masters degree in community psychology and has been a leader in Pennsylvania mental health initiatives. She is uniquely qualified to lead this type of workshop because she has experienced the system both as a patient and a mental health professional.

This workshop explores how you are affected by the mental health care system. There will be a discussion of the myths and facts of mental health and mental illness. We will examine the controversies that surround the use of drugs and electric shock therapy treatment. There will also be an exploration of the ways that peer listening can be used to create support systems and enhance the quality of life.

Take Back The Night

Family Services and Children's Aid Society Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center is once again sponsoring a Take Back The Night March and Rally on Thursday April 20, beginning at 6:30 PM.

We will meet in the parking lot of Family Services located at 716 East Second St. in Oil City and proceed to Justice Park; once at the park there will be several speakers who will address issues and concerns associated with sexual assault.

April is Sexual Assault Awareness Month and is recognized as such across the country. The theme in Pennsylvania this year is "No Means No". This theme emphasizes that anyone has the right to say "no" to sex, to decline sexual intercourse and have that "no" be respected.

According to the Pennsylvania Coalition Against Rape (PCAR), sexual assault centers across the Commonwealth served 34,007 people affected by sexual violence in 1993/94. Of this figure more than 8,000 were child victims of sexual assault. National statistics reveal that a woman is raped every minute in the United States.

Sexual violence affects everyone in our community - either as a survivor, a family member, a friend or co-worker.

Please join us on Thursday, April 20 and help us send the message that NO Really Does Mean NO!

Attention Organizations

Student Senate budget appeal hearings will be held April 12, 1995 at the Student Senate room, Rhoades Center, beginning at 10:30 AM.

Any organization wishing to appeal the appropriations for their budget must sign the request sheet located on the front door of the Student Senate room prior to that date.

As we finish out the 94/95 school year, Senate would like to encourage students to run for next year's Senate office. As a senator, you would be the voice of the students on campus when confronted with issues such as parking, smoking advocacy, etc. Also as a Senator, you will be dealing with budget appropriations, the snack bar and any major issues involving the students on Campus.

Buck-A Rub Sparks Comment

"It's better to light one candle than to curse the darkness" fueled the Christopher Movement that turns 50 this year. Most of us take the proverb to mean that it's better to showcase something good than to complain about what's lacking. So...

Unheralded, the Psychology Club had a first-rate fundraising when it sponsored "Buck-A-Rub" with timed backrubs @ $1.00 each. Ecologically, it cost the environment nothing; it probably earned the Club something and it inspired this letter.

Now, if groups did rent-a-person, I could sure use the help and my conscience would be a lot clearer about donating. We probably have lots of typist, home sewers, explainers-of-Lotus, tidy-uppers... you name it. Service profits go direct to the group, and the only environmental impact would be a list of services and suggested donations, on recycled paper.

Saving the environment, the Girl Scouts in Wilkinsburg (Pittsburgh) made and sold their own dried-bean soup mixes, a product kind to consumer diets and tooth enamel. Packing the mixes in simple baggies kept trash to a minimum.

It would be great if groups would use personal service or hand packed local products for fund-raising. People working together would also increase cooperation: it's hard to see "tree people" or "rednecks" when you're working together. May be we can light some more candles here at Venango Campus.

THE DOGGED DAYS AHEAD

When I was growing up, "the dogged days of summer" only seemed to happen the first week of August and referred to the relentless heat and humidity. This summer seems to have been full of dogged days.

Now classes begin and we're excited and frustrated, still wishing we were fishing instead of working like a dog at home and school.

I hope the Venango Voice can help make your days a little easier with a little humor when you are down, information when you are lost, and a friend if you need.

What does dogged mean? I went first to Roget's Thesaurus and found synonyms: stubborn, obstinate, tenacious, unyielding, resolute, persistent, determined, persevering, steadfast, rigid, inflexible, plodding, dogmatic, mulish. I thought these were great words to focus on this semester as we work towards our goals as opposed to the antonyms: undecided, weak, feeble.

We all survived the dogged days of summer. Let's put forth a dogged outlook at school and at home, to make everything work positively for us.

Stop by the Venango Voice, Room 205 Montgomery Hall. Bring us a story to print, an idea to work into a story, any suggestions as to what could enhance the paper. Remember, the Venango Voice is your voice.

My favorite time is 11:11
twice daily those straight lines shine such confident figures!
four even limbs that glow in synchronized symmetry
I was slow to accept the digital era
I preferred a face
but 11:11
that stable balance captured my fancy
I wait each day for those two flashes
I can't explain the satisfaction

four flawless limbs that point heavenward they say to me be patient
you too will become perfect unbent no lean no slant you will be whole
you will stand tall

The New Kid In Town

There are many new faces this semester, bright and eager, but none so excited as the new kid on Campus, Dr. Arthur J. Acton, our new dean.

We must take this moment to recognize, with distinction, some of Dr. Acton's many achievements.

He has his AB in History from The College of Wooster and his MA and Ph.D., also in History, from The University of Michigan.

Dr. Acton went from Instructor to Professor; from Assistant to the Dean to Dean of Venango Campus.

His contributions to the colleges and universities he has been affiliated are endless.

He's shared his knowledge through workshops, publications and papers, which focus on the freshman and sophmores in college.

Dr. Art Acton says he is "delighted to be here." Venango Campus is about the same size as other colleges he has worked for. Another common feature is the health related programs we offer.

Dr. Acton and his wife, Mary Ann, an attorney, live in North Hills with their two youngest children, Kate 4 years and Annie 6 years. Their oldest daughter, Audrey, lives and works in Taiwan.

Dr. Acton knows how the returning adult may have felt last week when the kids went off to school. His daughter Annie started her first day of school while he was here in Oil City.

When still in high school ,Art Acton was interested in the space program. He remembers making a rocket for a science project when Sputnik was an infant. He thought maybe he'd be an aeronautics engineer. He found he was more interested in history than math.

His outside interests are playing the classical guitar and acting, for which there is not enough time to do anymore. He sometimes can sneak in reading a mystery novel to relax.

When asked what his fondest memory is, he answered without hesitation, "My first date with my wife."

Introduce yourself when you see Dr. Acton on campus. He is receptive to new ideas and one of his priority lies in the services to the student and to assure a quality education for us all.

Why Do I Run?

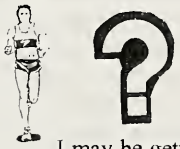
by John Grenci

I run for several reasons. I also swim and bike. First of all, running keeps me in shape. Being in shape allows me to feel better about myself and have more energy to do what I want to do. It create a positive cycle!

Some people believe that running will make you more tired to do things. I think the opposite is true. Did you ever take a nap in the middle of the day? In most cases, it really makes you more sluggish.

I also run because it gives me time to myself; to think, which is something I love to do (as some of you may notice by my all too frequent faraway look I have on campus). You can learn by any context, and I have learned by thinking while I am running. I will sometimes rehash a conversation with somebody I have previously talked to.

Emerson once said, "Every man is my superior in that I may learn from him." Do I always heed somebody's advice? Of course not. But I will from time to time.



I may be getting off of the subject a little, but while we are speaking of learning about people, there are some who day I need to talk more. This may sound cynical, but a lot of people these days do not converse; they just take turns talking. If you want to talk to me on the possible reasons that David Crosby overcame drug addiction and others have not, I'll talk as long as you want.

Perhaps I've strayed from the original intent of the article. Sometimes, I can't help myself.

By the way walking is great also. However, I enjoy running 10K races and triathlons. It is hard to get in sufficient shape for these races by just walking.

Principle Or Principal

The other day when I went into Dr. Acton's office to interview him for the Venango Voice, I had a flashback of being called into the Principal's office in highschool for "smoking in the boy's room", I mean girls room.

I got to thinking. Which principle/principal is it?

Synonyms of Principle: origin, source, belief or set of beliefs, system, opinion, teaching.

Synonyms for Principal: chief, prime, main, essential, superior, unrivaled, controlling.

I found out which principal set the principle.

I Double Dare You

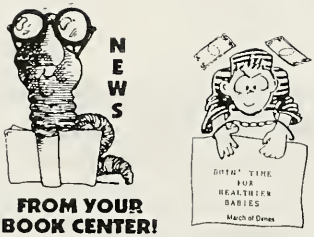
I want to throw a challenge to all students, faculty and staff. Submit an article, joke (printable), recipe, poem, words of wisdom, your philosophy of life (in less than a zillion words if possible), anything you may want to write about, to the Venango Voice.

If you are shy and don't want to use your name, use an alias

Everyone has some worth while words or an anecdote to make us laugh. It can be truth or fiction.

I challenge you to submit an article, big or small, to the Venango Voice.

I double dog dare you.



Check out the posters in the Bookstore. 20% off sale!

Student Charges end the 15th- that's Friday!

To return a book now, you must have your receipt and a drop slip indicating withdrawal from class.

Books are in the process of being returned to Clarion. If you put off purchasing any textbook, please do so as soon as possible.

HELP!!
I'VE BEEN ARRESTED

It's hard to believe, but I've been arrested and charged with setting Frame Office clock ahead one hour. I can't dispute this charge and I will be "Doin' Time for Healthier Babies" with the March of Dimes Jail and Bail.

I will be locked up on Sept. 13th at 10:00 am till 6:30 pm. I plan to through myself on the mercy of the court by raising my bail of $200.

Please help me reach my bail and donate to the March of Dimes. On behalf of the unborn and newborn babies that will benefit from your generosity, THANK YOU!

Information Update

Last year we were all given a school directory with the names and phone numbers of all students at Clarion University, Main and Venango Campuses.

Alas, some don't want thier name in the directory. No problem! I've been there!

Contact Kim Price, Rm 209, Montgomery Hall, before September 14, if you do not want your address and phone number in the directory.

CAREER UPS AND DOWNS

Have you "fallen" victim to the Autumnal Syndrome?

Did you "fall" out on the wrong side of the bed this morning?

Have you "fallen" for that old cliche, "Don't do today what you can put off doing until tomorrow!"?

Are you "falling" asleep in all your classes because you question what purpose they will serve in your future?

Are you hoping that your college experience will help you "fall" into a career that is just right for you?

If you answered "yes" to any of these "fall" symptoms, you may be suffering from "Autumnal Syndrome," that vague malady that leaves its victims "prone" to inertia regarding the potential for upward advancement in life.

Fortunately, at the Career Counseling Center, we have a prescription that can give you relief from the ups and downs of haphazard career choices. We can help you avoid the possibility of "falling" into an inappropriate career that may render you "downfallen" and "depressed" all the working days of your life.

Personnel and resources at the Career Counseling Center offer you supportive assistance in the selection of a college major and ultimate career choice that is suitable for you.

To get the "highlights" on your future career, "hie" thee to the Career Counseling Center, Pronto!

Appointments are "highly" recommended, but walk-ins are welcomed on a space-available basis.

The Center is located in Room #211, Montgomery Hall, or call the Career Coordinator, Cindy Jarzab, at 676-6591 ext. 272.

Business Students on Probation

If you recently received a letter from the Business Department at Clarion about attending a mandatory meeting, you may be able to save yourself the trip to Main Campus.

You can meet the requirement of this meeting by making and keeping an appointment with Laura Jamison in Rm 205 Montgomery Hall, ext. 281.

Laura is in the office Tue. 11:00 am till 3:00 and Thur. 3:00 till 5:00 pm, other times by appointment.

You do not have to attend the Clarion meeting if you make an appointment.

Is Your Mentor Looking For You?

The Mentor Program is unique to Venango Campus. It is designed to acclimate the new Freshman to the ways and means of our campus. Your Mentor has been through it and is one of your best resources, available for free.

The students who are your Mentors have the same hectic class and homework schedule, family responsibilities and jobs you do.

The Mentor has the added work of getting in touch with each of their 12-20 protegees, setting up 3 meetings, each semester, with each protegee, and filling out the paper work for the administration.

These meetings are required and reflect in the Mentor evaluation as well as evaluating as to whether the Mentor Program is needed.

How are you as a protegee helping or hindering their responsibilities?

Each Mentor is scheduled to be at Rhoades Desk or in Montgomery Hall 5-10 hours a week.

They spend hours trying to telephone and/or track down the list of protegees, set up the meeting time and hope the protegee shows up.

This is not all Freshman students, I can assure you, but enough that it is very frustrating to the students who are giving their time, adding to their daily responsibilities, to help you.

Even if you have no questions or concerns at this time, meet with your Mentor and help them out. I know they will be there when you come up against something you need help with.

What Is C.A.B.?

by Tim Rodgers

That question was answered for 10 students on Wednesday September 6. They learned that the C.A.B., or the Campus Activities Board, plans most of the events here at Venango Campus.

The C.A.B. holds a variety of activities throughout the semester. Among them are dances; a dinner/cruise aboard the Gateway Clipper in Pittsburgh; a semi-formal dance at the end of the semester; and, this semester, a comedian.

They also found out how much fun it is to "Ride the CAB".

Anyone interested in being on C.A.B. should see Kim Price in Montgomery Hall, Room 209.

The Advisor assignments for the Fall 1995 semester have been completed and are posted on the "red wall" outside Frame Administration Office.

Students are encouraged to meet with their advisor prior to the start of the telephone registration in October.

So, stop in and see your advisor, even if it's just to say "hello" and introduce yourself.

Ride The Gateway Clipper

The good news is: There is still room on board the Gateway Clipper this Friday and tickets are available at the Bookstore. Students $10, Guests $15.

The bus is full. But, grab a friend or two, share the ride down and back. It is a great time. Good food, fun and relaxation, away from the books.

The bus leaves from Venango at 4:30pm and will return about midnight.

Leadership Workshop

The dates and time for the Leadership Workshops, noted in the Student Calendar Handbook, are incorrect.

All Leadership Workshops will be held from 7:00pm till 8:00 pm, on Thursdays, in Room 101 Montgomery.

The change was made because students mentioned they would be more likely to attend if the workshops were held on Thursday evenings.

Check out the red posters around campus for the complete listing of workshops. Students attending at least 4 will receive a certificate of completion. (Keep those resumes in mind). Preregistration is not required.

This weeks workshop is "Call to Order/Myers Brigg Inventory" which is a leadership assessment tool.

Business Club Reviews Resume Need

There was an article in the Derrick, Friday September 8, asking for 1000 resumes from the region, to be put on a data base.

The purpose of this action is to have documentation of the labor pool that is available in this area. When a company looks us over as a potential sight for their business, there will be evidence of talent they could use.

This is not a job service but a tool to help recruit new business to our region. That includes Venango, Clarion, Crawford and Forest counties.

Cindie Litwiler, director of Oil City's Community Development Corp. says, "Companies are looking at Pittsburgh and Erie because they assume the labor pool is there. But we have no record, no way of showing just what talent we have here."

The Business Club encourages everyone to refine that resume and take it to Angel Muschweck in Room 206 Montgomery, who will forward them to the Community Development Corp.

Don't forget, the Business Club meets every Wednesday at 4:00 in Rhoades. Everyone is welcome.

Women Empowering Women

You Are Not Alone
by Barbara Koehler

Look at us, you are not alone.
We've been battered and broken,
Yet we look so whole.
We've watched the drugs and the booze,
Destroy lives, steal souls.
We have mending hearts and broken homes.

Look at us, we've fought for our health
Against disease and death.
Partners have left us,
Empty children just guess,
As we battle a system
That says we are less.

Look at us, you are not alone,
We're all here together
Learning to stand on our own.
Look at us, we need a friend
As we pick ourselves up
And start over again.

Women Empowering Women is a support group that shares ideas, teaches effective communication skills, and deals with relationship problems in an informal peer setting. We will be meeting in Room 118 Frame, September 20, 1995 from 9:30 to 11 AM. See you there!

Many have shown interest in this group, but finding a time convenient for all of us has been our main problem. Let us know what time on Wednesday would be better for YOU. Please fill out this form and drop it off at the Rhoades desk before September 25, 1995.

The Neighborhood Committee

by Bill Gaisford

The other day, while studying, I heard voices in the yard and then a knock on my door. I opened the door to find a group of neighbors, including Bob from next door, standing there asking to talk to me. I saw no harm in that, so I asked Bob in. Bob put a handkerchief over his nose and his watering eyes scanned the room.

"Shh," I said, "We have to talk in whispers or we'll start an avalanche. You say your from what committee? Never heard of it. Oh well, come in and sit down.

You see that mountain of dirty dishes? I think that's the culprit. But don't talk too loud or make any sudden movements, or the whole pile will come crashing down. It's been that way for oh, I'd guess about six weeks now. I don't remember whose turn it is to wash them and it really doesn't matter, since at this point it's purely as issue of principles.

You know how it goes. Maybe it was my turn to do them, (although I don't think it was). But even if it was my turn, I think that was the night I had to study for a mid term or something.

Oh come on now, don't give me that look. What's more important, a few dishes or my mid term? Don't tell me you'd rather do dishes that study for a test.

Well, I guess sometimes it is more appealing. But not in this case! Just look at that teetering, crooked, stack of putrefied plates, with silverware still stuck in between them. Would you wash them?

You know, the archeologist in me wants to trace back through the weeks of dishes to study the diet of this local sub-culture called two college students/dysfunctional family.

Look here, see this green stuff? Spaghetti sauce. Had it for breakfast last week. And here, right here with the hair growing on it, I think that's the spinach I fixed for the kids three weeks ago. And look way down here almost to the bottom. See it? A piece of newspaper stuck to the syrup on that bowl! I'll bet it has a date on it.

Whadda ya mean it doesn't take that long to study for a test? What do you know about it? When was the last time you....Shh! They're quivering!

Who ever is closest to them when they fall will have to wash them. It's like they're blocked from our consciousness somehow, and if they tumble down they'll be forced to our attention and we'll have to deal with them.

I'm really concerned about this but I can't break down and do them, that would be a sign of weakness. Besides, I really like the quiet and best of all, our whole family is studying like never before.

At first, whenever we asked one of the kids to wash them, they would say, "I can't, I have homework to do." I was a little slow catching on and I would think, "Isn't that great? Those kids have really taken an interest in school!" But it didn't take long for me to start "studying" after I noticed everybody staring at me. So we sat for hours on end, our noses buried in books. Every once in a while you catch someone peeking over the top of their book, waiting for the others to crack.

I'll bet that you'd suffer through a few dirty dishes in order to have three kids on the principals list. I'll bet my wife and I both make the dean's list this semester. (cont. pg 2)

I'm telling you, we're all going to be genius' before those dishes get done.

But then again, I really am tired of paper plates and microwave food. And we haven't spoken to one and other for at least five weeks. And the smell!! Peeeuuu!! For the sake of sanitation, I suppose someone should wash them. We could have an outbreak of cholera or something.

But then again, maybe not. No self respecting germ in its right mind would want to live in that mess. And besides, if I give in this time I will set a precedence and forever more be expected to wash the dishes when they pile up. They'll know that I'm the weak one, that I'll wimp out and wash them. No sir, I'm not going to be the one to give in.

Well, thanks for being concerned about us, I hope that answers your question. And I'm really sorry, I didn't think you could smell them from outside. By the way, I never heard of this neighborhood committee before. Uh, wait! Please don't slam thaat!"

Jubilee Kitchen

When you're a woman on foodstamps and welfare and find your self also getting help at Jubilee Kitchen in Pittsburgh, you have no fun money at all. Thus, someone's castoffs, oversize costume jewelry, sample lipsticks, soaps you get in motel rooms---almost any little thing---can brighten your life.

If you get your discards to me, I'll send them there.

Once, for instance, I was given a pair of overwhelming earrings, which went to the Kitchen. There my girlfriend, they call her "the earring lady", gave them to a woman who'd just come out of prison. Now THAT was making someone's day.

Remember the Jubilee Kitchen when you clear out old boxes and cartons. For jewelry, the bigger and gaudier, the better. For cosmetics, smaller preferred.

ALF

No, it's not your favorite TV show. It's Autumn Leaf Festival, held annually in Clarion.

We have Oil Heritage Week in Oil City, Applefest in Franklin and Clarion has their ALF.

The week began October 7 and runs through October 14.

The streets in Clarion are full of crafts, food and shows. Of course all the merchants have their special sale stuffs.

This week, Molly McFadden and Kori Kellogg, our Homecoming representatives have the honor of joining in the activities of ALF, as this is Clarion's Homecoming weekend.

The fun for them will start on Thursday, they will be involved in the activities on Friday, and will be in the ALF parade Saturday at Noon.

The Homecoming Queen will be crowned during halftime at the football game, Clarion vs Shippensburg, which begins at 2:00 pm

We should all experience ALF once in our life. This year we should experience ALF to support Molly and Kori. This is a great experience for them.

Case No. 61004198FU

Let me introduce myself- you can call me Case Number 61004198FU. You've met me before, but you've already called me by a different name of your choosing. Names like: welfare bum, lazy, good-for-nothing.

You stand behind me in grocery stores, spying over my shoulder to make sure you tax dollars aren't being stolen and abused.

Since you're a member of the working class you seem to think that gives you the right to dictate my life. You assume that since I am on Public Assistance I am incapable of making intelligent decisions concerning my future.

That's enough! I've decided you need to be enlightened.

I am not simply a mindless case number in the states computer system. I am first and foremost a mother of two terrific sons. Even more so than that I am struggling to escape the ever crushing dependency of the state welfare system by returning to college so I can make opportunities available in the job market that weren't available before.

What Is Your Habitual Ritual?

There are times that being habitual is good and sometimes it can be bad.

Whenever I need to print out a page of this paper to proof, I go outside and smoke a cigarete while it's doing its thing.

My smoking is habitual and not so good.

Most of my classes are in the evening. When I leave class I go home and do my homework immediately while it is still fresh in my mind.

This is a good habitual ritual.

Synonyms: ingrained, fixed, routine, automatic, disciplined

This is a daily struggle for me because I have to juggle my children, finances, and education to fit into a tightly calculated time frame. I have no time or money to experience and "small pleasures" of life like the average person. I doubt this introduction will improve your attitude towards myself or others like me but at least I feel better knowing that someday I may be your supervisor.

Pajama Party Benefit

I was getting ready for a yard sale this week, cleaning out the bathroom closet, wondering where all the sheets and blankets came from that we never use. The worse part of getting ready for the sale is figuring a price and marking each item.

Yesterday I saw a poster that caught my attention and promised to save me alot of work and help some one else at the same time.

First American Home Care of Seneca is hosting a Pajama Party Benefit. The volunteers will be accepting pajamas, robes, blankets, and other bedding items for the needy and home bound in our area.

Thursday, Oct 26 -Noon till 6:00 PM, take your donations to Duawl Prefessional Plaza parking lot, across from Mongs Fast and Fresh on Route 257 in Seneca.

Let your Fall cleaning project or just a look in the closet help our neighbors.

Lonely

by Lora A Lamb

Dejected due to the awareness of being alone;
Synonym: Forlorn

Phillip sat one day after he turned sixteen and told himself he was lonely. Yes, lonely. Lonely to be with only one person for the remainder of his life. Lonely to do what he never had a chance for. Lonely to know what he liked, what he wanted to do, what his favorite color was, and just remember his own birthdate.

He was lonely. His heart was empty. His mind not his own. His soul tumbling in a void. His body being used like a hooker. He was constantly lonely.

But Phillip Miles' loneliness was purley mental. There were women in his life, lots of women, though none could keep his interest. Phillip felt like an actor, but the only role he was best at was being lonely.

His emotions would peak and falter as if at once. Phillip's work was quite suited for his quick emotions. He was a salesman. No, not the love 'em and leave 'em type. He was the type of salesman who sold himself in return for themselves. Not mattering if intercourse was part of the transaction. Though on occasion of meeting one of his woman friends, Phillip was on the carpet before he'd introduced himself. Apparently, (he came to find later) she had been watching porno movies and drinking whiskey since she woke.

For him, the fact was when she opened the door and he looked into her eyes, Phillip saw her: The mind, soul, and heart. He fell deeply in love with this her, then the feeling disappeared. Phillip Miles fell in love every hour, (if averaged on a daily bases over a course of a year) or whenever he met a girl.

The women he met were all of different types, races, descriptions, and personalities. One he was fond of had black hair, blue eyes. She was tanned and toned with a sweet disposition and old fashioned mannerism. The one he least liked was a blonde haired, brown eyed, plump girl with the personality of a pitbull and the temper of a doberman.

So, some were jealous of the others, because he stayed friends with them all. Sometimes they were hard to keep track of. He would forget ones birthday or remember anothers on that birthday. He surprised even himself keeping up with them the way he did. And so Phillip's life went on day by day with countless women; Tiresome, but Phillip went on.

He was mentally tired of remembering names, addresses, birthdays, favorite colors, and the such so many women like men to remember. He was physically tired of going from place to place, sleepless nights, and endless days. His hear ached at being caught up with so many others and himself being unimportant. He had no time for himself.

The feeling of deep, true love was there and gone, despite his mother's constant ravings about how a deep, true love stays with you till you die. They will always be with me, he'd reply to her remark. She would only smile and say, "Yes, in your heart they stay. Your right.", pat his head, and shoo him away. His mother never understood the women he met through his entire life- since his age of reason- would physically be with him every day.

Phillip forgot about the playground his mother took him to. His ash blonde hair would catch in the breeze as he swung high in the air, almost to the bar of the swing set. His hands had gripped the chains so tight his knuckles would whiten and his eyes gleam with joy, while his open mouth caught the wind he's made. But he met women at the park and no longer went.

He forgot about the teddy bear he slept with at age four, and longed to hold it again. He thought he would cry but only remembered on.

Phillip forgot about the little red fire truck he played with as a toddler: The one which he'd push a button and make the sirens blare and push to make lights twirl. He now pushed a stone on the sidewalk, recalling his favorite toy and made the fire truck noises little boys make.

Phillip sat on the curb and rain began to pour, forming puddles and matting his hair. The rain reminded him of the summer he insisted on wearing his raincoat and goulashes to play outside despite the blazing, hot sun.

He laughed and got up to jump in the puddles. His sneakers filled with water, making squishy noises when he walked. He stuffed his hands in his jacket pockets and followed the flow of water in the gutter. He wanted to be like the flow; Free and having a destination. He longed to have a purpose and surely it wasn't pleasing all the women or selling himself.

Phillip began to hate giving himself to them and having them take up all his time. He wanted to live and not be lonely, but he looked into her eyes through the rain- or tears, he wasn't sure- and fell deeply in love with her. The feeling instantly disappeared as Phillip.

Phillip Miles died in the rain from being lonely.

Yes, he was lonely for himself.

The Nature of Things

by Lee Masters

I slam on my brakes every time the tiniest of animal, reptile amphibian or bird gets on the road. Yes even those toads that some say look like a leaf or glob of tar. You'd think I'd have whip lash and would be hanging out with Edger Snyder.

Dave Barry the humorist wrote an article, which was reprinted in last weeks Clarion Call, titled Rodent Revolt. You have to get a copy and read it. This article brought tears to my eyes.

Woodchucks holding people hostage in a sewage plant & squirrels charging children as they play, is hard for me to believe. I do believe the one about the bees attacking a TV reporter because of his hair gel.

The news of all the animals lives I have saved by braking, I'm sure has spread throughout the forest and could only add to their good nature. They are not akin to disgruntled postal workers.

Last week I shared the Rodent Revolt article with my 11 year old daughter. On our way to Scouts we watched a squirrel cartwheel & triple flip, king-fu style, across a four lane highway, only to attack a blue sedan.

We laughed and cried simultaneously. We weren't sure which was appropriate.

An Eccentric View

By Joan R Huber

Are you unmotivated? Do "Success" and "Career" speakers leave you cold? Congratulations; you're one of the few to recognize teleculture BS. Think about Socrates and Jesus, about Moses, about Jimmy Carter. Were they successful career people, or did they give their best to make a better world? There IS a difference. Career is about YOU, and so is success. Making a better world is about other people.

Does "goal-oriented" also leave you cold? Congratulations; you're one of those who take time to smell the flowers. If you're TOO goal-oriented, you miss all the goodies when you look something up in the dictionary. Gaelic stone inscriptions and Druidic temples in New England that antedate Leif Ericson were identified by hobbyists and by a person more interested in learning than in climbing the professional ladder.

Aim for righteousness, for helping others.

Remember, a great book from the library is equally available to a professor and a burger-flipper. But simple folk with sights set on a brand-new Olds Cutless Cierra '98 and a $350,000 house have no time to read because they're already owned by their plastic and their banks.

It's your life, your only one; live it righteously, YOUR way, the INTELLIGENT way, and don't buy into slogans and buzzwords.

Why is 'X' a Kiss?

Our custom of putting X's at the end of letters and notes to symbolize kisses grew out of medieval legal practices. In order to indicate good faith and honesty in those days, the sign of St. Andrew - a cross- was placed after the signature on all important documents.

Thereafter, contracts and agreements were not considered binding until each signer added St. Andrew's cross after his name. Then he was required to kiss the document to further guarantee faithful performance of his obligations. The cross was drawn hurriedly, and ofter it was tilted and looked much like the letter "x".

Sports Predictions

by John Grenci

Well, you've got the two best teams in baseball meeting in the World Series; the Cleveland Indians and the Atlanta Braves. In fact, they are tow of the best teams you will find in any given year. Perhaps it will be the type of series that will bring some of the fans back after last season's debacle.

The Cleveland Indians won 100 games which was amazing since only 144 games were played this year. They had the best hitting and pitching in the American League. The Braves are back in the World Series for the 3rd time in 4 completed seasons and as usual have what might be the best pitching staff in baseball, led by Greg Maddux, who is almost certain to win an unprecedented 4th straight Cy Young Award.

The Indians have a better all around team, but the Braves have 4 games at home and have been there before. I'll pick the Braves in seven.

There are two fights on November 4th. One is the third bout between Evander Holyfield and Riddick Bowe. The first two were two of the best fights you'll ever see. If the third one is anything like the first two, this rivalry might go down as the greatest ever (yes, better than Ali-Frazier).

Riddick Bowe is the complete fighter. He has size, quickness, agility, power, and he can take a punch. He also has become one of the most unlikable people in boxing. He is notorious for late hits and during one press conference, actually punched his opponent (bare-fisted) in the face.

Evander Holyfield, on the other hand, is perhaps the most likable person in boxing. A soft-spoken Christian, he conducts himself in a gentlemanly manner in and out of the ring.

What does this have to do with the fight? Everything, because I believe that Riddick Bowe will outbox Evander Holyfield but the judges will not see it that way. Sometimes judges see it the way they want to see it. Holyfield will win a split decision.

The other fight is Mike Tyson and "Buster" Mathis. This fight has two things in common with the fight between Tyson and "Buster" Douglas. One is obvious; Tyson's opponents are both nicknamed "Buster". The other is that they both had a parent die right before the fight. (Douglas' mother died a few months before the fight and he dedicated the fight to her.) Douglas fought the fight of his life. He was a 42-1 underdog. My heart tells me that the same thing could happen again. My head tells me something else. I'll have to pick Tyson by a 5th round knockout.

Flu Shots Sponsored

Phi Theta Kappa has arranged for the Visiting Nurses Association to administer flu shots on campus. They will be given in Rhoades gymnasium on Monday October 30 between 2:00 and 4:00 pm.

Go Directly To Jail... Do Not Pass Go...

by Lora Lamb

Several staff and administrators helped raise money for the March of Dimes drive on Sept. 13 by 'volunteering' in the Jail & Bail.

Sally Dolan, Darlene Hartman, Cindy Jarzab, and Linda Brown were all 'charged', handcuffed, and 'sentenced' to 'jail' located at Grandview Estates in Oil City. Barb Reagle judged with a firm gavel, even fining laughing 'criminals' and not stooping to bribery.

Her Honor, Barb Reagle, said "Participation in the Jail & Bail showed the commitment of Venango Campus to the community."

Have you considered what the March of Dimes contributes to the community?

They educate pregnant women of the importance in staying healthy and drug-free. Nationally, they contribute the Mom-Mobile used to transport pregnant women for prenatal care.

They have representatives in legislature to see the health needs of women and children are met and remain neutral to any political issues.

The March of Dimes has donated grants to the Oil City Vo-tech, and Franklin and Titusville Hospitals for the teens Outreach Program. So, donate to the March of Dimes or volunteer your time.

Linda Brown is not shown.

F.R.U.M.P.

by Joan Huber

The initials stand for Frugal, Responsible, Unpretentious, Mature Person, an informal group begun some time ago that still seems like a good idea: no card, no newsletter. And it's environmental. Being frugal and mature, for example, I reject Maxwell House's single serving coffee bags and coupon. All we need is more trash in the environment.

Rather than trash student's uncollected journals, I remove the used portion and offer the rest to other unpretentious persons. And rather than buying endless sport water bottles, I frugally refill from gallon jugs of water.

An exemplary mature person MADE Barbie clothes and houses with her daughter, encouraging another generation of frugal responsibility. And it's amazing how well you can decorate on FRUMP principles while being environmentally responsible. Any good FRUMP stories out there?

9:00 am MH Room 211
Friday, January 19, 1996

Is ACES Needed Here

Do your children get the child support they are entitled to? If not, they are among the 23 million kids who are owed $34 billion in support because fathers and mothers refuse to pay.

What do I do?

One divorced mother with children asked the same thing, but didn't stop there.

In 1984 Gerri Jensen founded ACES - Association for Children for Enforcement of Support - with only 25 members. Now, ACES has 300 chapters among 47 states and 30,000 members, of which 87% receive support, although ACES doesn't guarantee it. ACES has a $20 membership fee since they don't receive government or United Way funds.

I am conducting a survey and I need some feedback from students at Venango Campus. Below are three simple questions to answer. When done please drop the questionnaire into the ballet box located on the desk at Rhodes Hall. Your cooperation is greatly appreciated.

Annual Ethics Essay Contest

The College of Arts and Sciences, of Clarion University, sponsors this essay contest to draw attention to ethical issues and questions.

The essay must be well developed and complete in 1800-3000 words. Essays must be original and unpublished work of author. Deadline is Feb 1, 1996.

This year's theme is Environments of the World. Students are asked to submit a thoughtful essay based on an ethical issue relating to a particular environment: e.g., business, the media, healthcare, education, social or cultural, physical resources, the workplace. You can even use an internal or imaginary setting.

An example of a topic question is, "What kind of social environment creates peace and harmony".

The Venango Campus contact persons for this Clarion University essay contest are Dr. Joan Huber and Darlene Hartman.

Everyone, Vote!

Election day is Tuesday, November 7, 1995. Voters across PA will be asked to decide whether to amend our state constitution to allow for the option of videotaped or closed-circuit television testimony by children in legal proceedings.

Be aware of Joint Resolution No. 1 if you aren't already:

Shall the Pennsylvania Constitution be amended to provide 1) that a person accused of a crime has the right to be "confronted with the witness against him," instead of the right to "meet the witness face to face," and 2) that the General Assembly may enact laws regarding the manner by which children may testify in criminal proceedings, including the use of videotaped depositions or testimony by closed circuit television?

Don't go to the polls with your eyes closed. Make an educated vote. Know what is going on.

Workshops

Are you interested in a WordPerfect or Lotus workshop? Everyone in this day and time should be computer literate. The employers out there expect it.

If you would like to learn more about WordPerfect and/or Lotus, through a workshop, sign up outside room 206, Montgomery.

Enrolled Students: Students who have accumulated 12 or more credits (this does not include the credits you are taking this semester, Fall 1995) must submit a Change of Status Form by December 15, 1995 in order to be considered for nursing classes beginning Fall of 1996.

The Amish Auction

by Phil Terman

We bounce the truck down route 208 through Clintonville, past the open windows with the off-white curtains drawn.

Rolling farm land, a light blue late summer sky. Buzzing of insects, hummingbirds sweeping in and out of the morning glories that climb the garden trellises.

Catching the sign and the arrow, we turn down a gravel and dirt road until we come upon a line of trucks parked off the side, against a barbed wire fence beyond which a half dozen cows quench their thirst in a small pond.

Only two weeks ago we were in Manhattan, breathing in exhaust and listening to the money-changers of Orchard Street, the dealers of Washington Square Park, we were waiting in the hundred degree heat for the light on Broadway and Houston to change and for subway number 6 to clatter and screech its underworld arrogance so unlike the soft and rippling auctioneer's voice as it rolls and dips in accents and punctuated ecstasies through the farmland of Clinton Township where you know for a fact where the sun is stationed and the weather is nowhere obscured.

Suddenly, between the leaves of large oaks, we see the tips of straw hats and bits of goaties gathered in a congregation.

Off to the side, ice cream is sold just moments after being cranked through a machine run by pulleys and a generator; you could stand and watch a man adding cream, sugar, vanilla into the freezing shaft, hear it spinning, watch the women dipping their spoons and filling styro-foam cups beyond their brim for a dollar--no cash machine, no credit-cards, and, a little further off, a sign made out of blue paper and marker: roast beef: $2, donuts, 35C, the total calculated in their head.

And the homemade pies: blueberry, cherry, elderberry.

Amish out from as far away as Centerville, Ohio: children smaller versions of their parents, older women selling freshly baked bread and home made pasta, teenage boys with their first growth of whiskers, old men with the smoke of pipes billowing out of long gray beards.

And the items to be auctioned in an orderly scatter: farm equipment, hand sewn quilts, hanging plants, raspberry bush starters, garden tools, bluebird houses, rocking chairs crafted with oak and hickory branches steamed and twisted like bamboo.

A bag of jalopeno peppers, a basket of red tomatoes.

Some folks mosey around, others chat in old German and Dutch, men in the barn, women on the porch of the enormous white farm house.

I study the auctioneer. Himself Amish, no older than seventeen. Blue zipperless pants, like the rest, buttoned, with suspenders, straw hat with black band, like the rest. Bookish; face covered with pimples. Though his arms are powerful, he walks with a cane. His voice is quick and clear as he rattles through the numbers, stressing and pointing, flipping his head this way and that so he can catch the bids that are made only with the subtlest of gestures: a sharper glance in an eye, a slight twitch of a forehead, a quick mumble.

An older man, not Amish, approaches and starts to chat.

"See that auctioneer?" he asks, pointing. "I first met him at a cow auction. He came in with that cane and sat down on the bench next to me."

Bill squints his eyes into the sun; his face is crusted and his skin almost gold as if he'd spent many hours in his own fields. "Lost both my legs,' "the kid told me. 'Lost them in a silo when I was four. My dad was still on the tractor and I ran off and climbed up the silo and he didn't know so when he turned it on he didn't know I was in there. Lost the left one up to my knee and the right one a little above my knee.'"

Bill pauses and moves his face closer to mine. "He's damn good auctioneer, though. No one taught him. He must've practiced himself out in the pastures, walking on those artificial legs out where the cows were grazing and pointing at them and practicing the numbers, as if they were bidders."

I imagine him, while his brothers and cousins

were sweating with their harrows and sickles, walking by himself with hobbled dignity in the pasture, mornings and afternoons, fooling with tone and tempo, stress and modulation like the Greek shepherd with the speech impediment who spoke to himself with marbles in his mouth in the empty hills above the sea for hours so he would one day become a famous orator.

He wanted to be someone in his community.

Now, the auctioneer has everyone's attention as he holds in his hands a rusted metal milk jug much older than he is that is being sold to help pay the local Amish schoolhouse.

"O.K, do I hear $10.00? Someone give me $10.00. Yes or no?"

THE HATS

"Why am I here? I was on this earth when Jesus Christ wore shorts. The kids will be home from school and, for the first time ever, I won't be there to greet them. They'll need a shrink to get over the feeling of abandonment. The teacher isn't here yet. There's still time to run and if I do it now, maybe, I can get my money back. Oh shit, he's here. Not a good time to exit the dismal room that appears to be full of boys who aren't old enough to shave. I am stuck."

The first day of my second stab at higher education. It had been eighteen years since the last time I flew up the snake-like driveway to Venango Campus. I managed to find my way to the classroom. It was dreary and impersonal. Even the wall-length windows weren't permitting any light to penetrate into that gloomy room. Immediately, I developed a case of urinary frequency which took four trips to the restroom to get under control. I prayed that my bladder would give me a break so I wouldn't have to raise my finger for "number one" on the first day of class. I was a wreck but at least there were no nervous hives. Other students filed in. We sat together, in the dark, like trained seals, waiting for the teacher. I wonder if we were all thinking we would get detention if we turned on a light?

A tall, gentle looking man bounded into the room. Just from his appearance I could tell he was an artist, possessing all the uniqueness that distinguishes the artisan from the artless. His ebony hair was thin on top but flowing from the sides to his neck. His dress was relaxed. Not a "suit" who would lecture me to terminal boredom. He turned on the light both literally and figuratively for me. This class was going to be fine if only I could overcome by feeling of being older than dirt.

I now have seventeen classes under my belt. Two major themes and several journal entries have been completed. I feel an extraordinary kinship with everyone in the dingy classroom which, from the time our melting pot of "adult learners" and "traditional students" enter, transforms into a brilliantly illuminated area filled with a group of charming, witty people, all in different stages of personal development. All of these remarkable people are me. In August, 1975, I was the eighteen year-old, here because that was what was expected of me upon completion of high school. I didn't take it seriously because there was somebody else paying my tuition and all my other expenses. I skipped more classes than I attended. I hated to do the homework and I found it impossible to give the teachers my full attention. I despised the whole idea of college. I was earning money at McDonalds so why would I need to succeed in college in order to get a job? The "adult learners" were stodgy old people who were way too serious about everything. At the tender age of eighteen, my latest squeeze was much more important. Those "adult learners" were missing out on life.

Imagine this! I am now the "adult learner" who no longer has anyone to foot the bill. I am now totally responsible for the financial aspect of my education. I want the most bang for my buck so I pay attention and complete what is required of me. Instead of thinking up creative excuses for missing class, I would like to think of creative excuses to go to class every day. There is so much to learn and if a class is skipped, a valuable knowledge is forfeited and a piece of the quilt will always be missing.

Someday I will thank Polk Center properly for placing me in the unsafe situation that resulted in me being seriously hurt. Retirement is fine for the elderly but for me, the pain from my injury was intensified by the lack of mental stimulation. I wrestled with the idea of returning to Venango Campus but fear always won the match. No way would I fit in. When I finally decided to return, I was pleasantly surprised to find I blended very well with the diverse mix of students seeking knowledge.

The difference between my first experience at Venango Campus, twenty years ago, and my most pleasant return recently, is I am now focused on what I'm doing. I have a goal. I'm not any smarter than I was before, just rich with life experience. I am in a position, as an "adult learner", to be more sensitive regarding the conduct of certain "traditional students". After all, I've worn both hats in my quest for higher learning at Venango Campus. I understand where they are in life but, at the same time, I wish I could convince them that they are lucky to be at Venango Compus at this stage of their lives. Back then, I was sure I had the weight of the world on my shoulders. Now, I'm certain I do. Being responsible for two children, a house, a car and now college while battling crippling pain, is not my idea of a picnic. I would rather be eighteen again, with no responsibilities except school, but that wasn't the path chosen for me by my maker. Hindsight is 20/20. I wish I could make a video of all my errors in judgement, so I could pop it into a VCR evertime I hear some "youngster" complain about a simple assignment or how an evening class screws up their social life. My video would be useless though, because some things have to be experienced first hand. A TV screen isn't much of teacher.

I know I will suceed because of the hats I've worn. Soon, I hope to be the gifted teacher, mesmerizing my students with my own artistic abilities, prodding them along on their own path to the future. Yet another head covering I will be honored to wear.

Provost John Kuehn attended the reception, which featured readings by several of the writers, including Horner and Stants.

Thanksgiving

I was making my list of food and people that would be at my house this Thanksgiving and the word "abundance" kept popping into my brain.

There is always an abundance of turkey, cranberry relish, squashes and pies; not to forget the potatoes, homemade banana bread and zuchini bread, steamed apple pudding, and waldorf salad.

We include the members from both our families, of which we are both one of seven children, and some friends who have no family in the area join us. This is abundance.

As we join hands in prayer this holiday, I will give thanks and praise (as I do every day) for the abundance in our life at home as well as for the abundance of friends at school; the abundant knowledge that is there for the taking and the abundance of joy in life, that comes from giving.

The Warrior

by John Grenci

Evander Holyfield and Riddick Bowe fought for the third time on November 4 with Bowe winning by an eight round knock out. If there was one way I was certain Holyfield would not lose, it was by a knock out. Actually, it was not so much of a knockout as it was exhaustion. He simply fell over.

The fight was very unusual. Holyfield looked very sharp in the first round and I'm thinking this guy doesn't look old, as the critics were saying. But by the end of the third round, he looked quite old. He was spent. Something was wrong. This was not the man who is always in great shape. Either he does have a bad heart , as was earlier thought to be the case or his virus of three weeks before and leading up to the fight got the best of him. Even George Foreman left his broadcasting booth during the fight (something that is unheard of) to see about stopping the fight.

I have gotten together with a few buddies to watch all three of their fights. It will go down as one of the great rivalries. I can still remember in the first fight when Holyfield weathered the 10th round and Larry Merchant of HBO (as only Larry Merchant could) said "If Evander Holyfield weighs 205, his heart weighs 204." He ended up losing that fight. In the locker room afterwards, he had the look of a demoralized person and several people commented that "he won't come back from this beating". But he did. He beat Bowe in the rematch and it was one of the greatest fights you'll ever see.

It is hard to imagine Holyfield coming back after this defeat. He is now 33 years old. But, hey, so was Jesus at the time of His crucifixion. Before I am accused of blasphemy, let me say that Jesus asked us to be perfect as God is perfect. In spite of being in the brutal sport of boxing, Holyfield has done that as well as anybody.

If Holyfield does have a bad heart, I hope he retires. But whether he does or doesn't, I don't think he will. It's not in him. He said before the fight, "I believe I would rather die than just give up." I don't know if it will be against Mike Tyson or Riddick Bowe, or somebody else, but somehow, someway, there is a comeback left in boxing's greatest warrior.

HOMEWORK DAY

All day! Monday, November 20, 1995, 9:00 a.m. - 9:00 p.m. in the Learning Skills Center, Room 210 Montgomery Hall. Finals are coming up in two weeks. Are you prepared? Now is a good time to start studying.

Answer to Last Weeks Puzzle

Does everyone know the one about the statues that Dick Francis found good enough to include in one of his masterful mysteries? Seems a man statue and a lady statue stood on pedestals for a thousand years, through sun, rain, snow, and sleet. One day an angel appeared and said, "Because you two have stood so patiently for ten centuries, you now have an hour as living persons. Go." Rushing of man and lady to bushes, strong rustling of bushes and back to pedestals. "But you dear persons," said the angel, "You have used but a half hour." Rushing of man and lady off pedestal, "O.K., this time I'll hold the pigeon and you s--- on it." Or, what Venango needs is a little humor. It takes___ muscles to frown but only ___ to smile?

Write-Inn

The Write-Inn has two functioning Apple II computers, user friendly, complete with functioning ImageWriter (dot matrix) printer. If you have your own Apple operating disk and your own 5-3/4" floppy, come use them. Apples are a bit slower and orphans, but they may help you. Unlike IBM's as long as your operating system-Claris or Appleworks or whatever-is on 5-3/4" floppy, they seem to work.

Right now we have two IBM's and functioning printers, and the two remaining PC's should be back in operation soon. Check signs in the Write-Inn for developments.

NB: All our Writing Consultants are on-line and fully functioning.

Are You Consultant Material?

If you're interested, or even think you might be interested in being a writing consultant, please come to our meeting (every Monday, 21-1, 105 Frame.) It's the best way to learn about our work, our attitudes and our advantages. (Consultants need to have a 3.0 GPA and have completed English 111; they should enjoy helping others.)

Training for Writing Center Conferences, you need a signed PERMISSION SLIP from Dr. Huber. The course is 1 credit, requires attending the Monday noon meetings and peer-consulting the two hours a week you choose. The Write-Inn's a friendly place to work and consultants say it helps their own writing. Please come; we have a good thing and we want to share it.

Nature's Medicine and Cures

We all know that a lot of prescription drugs are made from herbs and plants, some very common to us. The Indians Medicine Man gathered his plants very carefully, knowing instinctively what they would be good for by the shape or color of the plant. There is a lot of controversy about tobacco these days. Here is some information as to what the Indian doctor may use it for.

Tobacco is found by experience to be good to expectorate phlegm from the stomach, chest and lungs. The juice, which can be sweetened or distilled or made into a syrup without losing its usage, is a remedy for worms. It will ease the headache and gas pains. It will help expel the kidney stones naturally.

The seed is effective to cure a toothache and the ashes of tobacco will cleanse the gums and whiten the teeth.

The juice is said to be good to kill lice on children's heads and if applied to any green wound or cut, will cure it quite effectively and will cleanse and heal an old sore.

Lost Leaves

The red leaf dances slowly downward from the maple, folded inward,

like an envelope with tiny veins scribbled on the face, and lands silently in the dead letter pile, to be raked

away with others, never reaching their true destination.

Personal Visioning

Vision has become a nineties buzzword. Management gurus tell us that all of us.. individuals, organizations, families.. need a vision. Stephen Covey says, begin with the end in mind. In other words, begin with a vision. Peter Senge, Joel Barker, Tom Peters all say that vision is power. In Barker's words, "vision is the most forceful motivator for change that you and I possess."

Personal Visioning is the theme of a full day conference to be held here at Venango Campus on January 11, 1996.

This seminar will cover what vision is, why it works, and why it is so powerful. It covers a process that enables one to create his or her own personal vision statement, the stumbling blocks that stand in the way of attaining a vision; not the least of which is chaotic ambiance of the latter twentieth century. It also includes various ways of checking the vision against one's values so you know you will still want your vision after it is achieved

Christmas Is Just Around The Corner

A Christmas Exchange Board, sponsored by Women Empowering Women is available in Rhoades Center.

You can place ads to buy or sell or trade items for the holidays. Check it out, around the corner from the Mentor's desk.

For further information contact Kay King, 676-6591 or Roberta Schroeder 677-0620.

It's getting closer to DIME STORE day at Venango Campus. The elves were peeking in Santa's bag and saw some of the items for sale. There was an artificial Christmas tree, women's and children's clothing, Christmas decorations, kitchenware items and more.

The store will be held from 9:00 am to 7:30 pm on Wednesday December 6, 1995 in the lobby of Montgomery Hall.

Come in and browse. Listen to the sounds of Christmas. Have some punch and cookies.

Everyone is always thinking of what to buy for so and so. With all the commercialization it is real easy to forget the Love that is the reason we celebrate this season. Take the time to read the story of the greatest gift given, given to us all, unconditionally.

ALO Reflects

The annual ALO Thanksgiving Dinner held on Friday November 17 was an enjoyable time for all who attended. There were over 160 people; comfy but not overly crowded.

The ceiling and table decorations were warm, attractive, charming, & beautifully Thanksgiving spirited, provided by Darlene Hartman.

The blessing was offered by Lou Adelson, who was thankful for an extended family through friends on campus, and remembered those who have no family, no warmth from the snow and no visible relief from hardships.

Students arrived with their tureens and families, filling Rhoades with great amounts of food, desserts, and people. The caterers (Zacherls) filled the table with the traditional turkey, stuffing and potatoes. The door prize, a colorful fall floral basket made by Darlene Hartman, was won by Jakki Helmbold. Congratulations Jakki!

The band arrived about 30 minutes early, which was perfectly O.K. with us. We were able to enjoy great music before and during dinner. Darlene Hartman and Mark Vath had to be asked to stop dancing because they were interfering with the traffic flow at the dessert table.

ALO would like to thank the Business Club for sponsoring the five piece Clarion Campus All Brass Band for our Thanksgiving dinner.

Out of 7 submissions to the Essay Contest(up from 4 last year) three winners were selected by judges Lou and Darlene. Diane Morrison placed third and Barbara Koehler took second place. Cynthia C. Jarzab was first place winner! Congratulations to each of the winners and to all who submitted their essays. The judges expressed the difficult time they had in selecting the winners.

We are in a sense a family with many things in common. This time of gathering gave us the opportunity to bring together our natural families and our extended family. Thank you to all who were able to attend this celebration of Thanksgiving at Venango Campus.

The Oil City Review:

Winter break is a perfect opportunity to begin creating or refining your talent for the 5th edition of the Oil City Review.

Submissions of Poetry, Fiction, Non-fiction, and Black & White Art Work will be accepted.

Students on campus are reminded to encourage their friends and family, who are not campus students, that their work is very much welcome.

Submissions are due March 15, 1996. They may be sent to Philip Terman, Clarion University Venango Campus, 1801 W. First St., Oil City, PA 16301 or placed in his mail box in Frame Office.

Be sure to include a cover page with your name, address and phone number. If you want your manuscript returned, include a self-addressed stamped envelope with your submission.

To Be Loved Like That

by Lora Lamb

Over the past five years, I've had these reoccuring dreams about Rich, an old boyfriend, and myself, Victory. We faded away after five months of building a trusting, honest, and open relationship. We'd known each other since childhood and I truly believe we were in love, but never talked about it, as if it was always understood. We made silent vows and kept them.

The dreams became more frequent after his call a couple weeks ago. I didn't tell him about my dreams, only listened as he told me his.

"I'm standing in the middle of a field full of forget-me-nots. This woman in a wedding gown walks up to me. Her veil's over her face and I kiss her. When I pull away, her face is a skeleton oozing with mud and magets."

How could I tell him mine were the same only a man in a tuxedo?

"This dream is getting to me because I keep..." He swallowed hard. "...hearing this song. Anyway, the shrink told me to contact you." No fuzz came over the line as we were quiet. "We have to see each other. Come up."

I accepted whole heartidly.

The week after I started wondering how our dreams were connected and what they meant? The dreams came every night. I couln't wait to see Rich.

Upon arrival in Lovelorn, I stopped by my old apartment where Rich and I spent our time. Staring at the bay window, I recalled dancing with him in silence to the song in our hearts. All over again, I swore I'd heard him whisper he loved me.

On the way to the only hotel in town, I realized Lovelorn, the town I'd left, but where Rich stayed, hadn't changed except the names and faces.

The name of the hotel had changed as well as its face. The wallpaper was now red roses on black velvet background. When I walked in my room, the wallpaper began melting. My favorite color and Rich's were blending together.

Definately a lack of sleep, but I had to write all that's happened before I contacted Rich to tell him I'm early. I didn't want to forget. Something might happen. I don't know what, but I feel SOMETHING.

Victory didn't see Rich. The dreams and tune overwhelmed him. He left to see her {as she was traveling to see him}, but he died in a car accident.

Devistated, Victory went to his grave under the massive oak at the top of the hill in the local Lovelorn cemetary. Through the heavy rain, she stared at the double heart tombstone and knew who he expected to be there. She even laid under the unmarked heart and cried for the love they knew.

I found her with a note in her hands telling whoever found her she wanted to be buried beside Rich. There was music playing- a tape compiled of one verse over and over...

"Nothing else could ever take you away from me cause you'll always be my dream come true."...

After years of searching for my parents, this is what I found instead. I was given my mother's diary: Thirty years long. My father, Rich, didn't know I exsisted and Victory moved, putting me up for adoption. If she would have told, he would have stayed. We could have been a family.

I read her diary and cried while thinking of the love and death they shared. I read of a fairytale love between my parents and cried even more, wishing to be loved like that.

Weather Alert

Since it's that time of year again, please remember that notice regarding university closings because of the weather will be announced on the radio. Students who live locally are asked not to call the Administration office to ask about class closings.

Executive Dean Has Message For Students

The semester is rapidly drawing to a close and final exams are now here. I wanted to take this opportunity in the last issue of the Venango Voice for this term to reflect on my experiences here this fall as your new Executive Dean and to tell you some of the things we have achieved this term and expect to see happening in the semester ahead.

You may have observed some changes already. The computers in the laboratory have been recently upgraded to eight megabytes of memory--you may notice they run faster. This will enable us to set up a "Windows" operating environment and to begin using "Windows" based software. I am expecting that you will see other improvements in the laboratory next term as well. Several printers will be ordered for the campus soon and some will be installed in the computer laboratory as well as in Write-Inn.

More high technology change will come next term with the introduction of an interactive video link between the Clarion and Venango Campuses. The telephone lines and connections are being installed and the system will be operational by January. The terminus on this campus will be located on the stage of the Rhoades auditorium. The curtained area of the stage provides flexibility and an optimal environment for sound and lighting. If things go according to plan, a few classes will be offered by video in the Spring term and by Fall 1996 more classes will be available. The video would not otherwise be able to provide because of limited demand. The interactive video connection will also let us conduct meetings between the campuses.

An even more visible change on campus next term will be the new draperies we are selecting for the classrooms in Frame and the new vertical blinds for Rhoades and for the Frame offices. They should be arriving by mid-semester. Also by that time we are hoping that in one classroom, Frame 208, new tables and chairs will have replaced the traditional student desks. It was a high priority request from student government.

Programmatically the most significant change for the long term future is the development of the Certified Occupational Therapy Assistant Program. This program has been approved by the University faculty committees, the Provost and the President and will soon be sent to the Trustees and to the State System office; it is expected to receive endorsement from both. We also expect to hear within a few days of the action of the American Occupational Therapy Association (the national accreditation agency) on our application. If that review is positive we will soon be able to admit students for entry into the program next year. We will provide more details on the new program next semester.

There have, of course, been disappointments. Things do not always move as quickly or in the ways we hope. We were unsuccessful, for the mo-

Appreciation

I always enjoy working on our campus paper. This semester I had a lot of help and ideas from you, the true voice of Venango. Thank you all who submitted articles, original pieces and ideas. You made my job easier and the paper a better publication.

I will be leaving in June. Is anyone interested in this fun job? Contact me at home or school.

Thanks to Mendy, for learning PageMaker and helping put the paper together and Tammy, for proof reading.

Sports Prediction

by John Grenci

It is December and that means, Finals, Christmas, and NFL playoffs. It would of course be inappropriate to predict what students are going to do on their finals, and about the only prediction you can make for Christmas is that there is a good chance it will fall on the 25th. The NFL playoffs are different. Everyone wants to chime in with their predictions around this time so I will give mine.

In the NFC, the two finalists will be the 49ers and the Cowboys. I believe that if they were to meet 10 times, they would each win 5 times. But they only play once, and the home field advantage means a lot, and it figures to go to Dallas (they have a better record as of this writing). We will assume they get it and Barry Switzer finds a way to win a big NFL game. So, Dallas goes to the Super Bowl.

In the AFC, it is a much more muddled picture. As usual, it appears that there is no dominant team. The Steelers are playing as well as anybody, and at 9-4 have the second best record in the league. The Chiefs have the best record (11-2), although some of their wins have not been that impressive. They are probably not as good as their record.

The Raiders have a solid team and are playing with enthusiasm since moving back to Oakland.

The Dolphins always have a great offense, but have lost 3 of their last 4 and still don't have a defense.

The Bills are 8-5, and linebacker Bryce Paup is on his way to being defensive player of the year.

John Elway can get hot at any given time, so we can't count the Broncos out.

Where does that leave us? Intangibles. The one that comes to mind is that the Bills will never live down their 4 straight Super Bowl losses until they win one, and still have the nucleus of the those teams intact. This could be their last hurrah. They lost to the 49ers a few weeks ago but could have beaten them. They were tied 10-10 in the third quarter when running back Darrick Holmes fumbled deep in the 49er territory, and the 49ers ran it back 96 yards for a touchdown. That is a 14 point swing, and proved to be the difference.

So, it is the Bills and the Cowboys in the Super Bowl. The cowboys will probably be at least 10 point favorites, but I'll pick the Bills in an upset; 27-17

Orphanage One

The delicate orphanage residing between the tough accordian folds of my navel, explodes with golden longing.

My child body aches,
a hollow orphanage,
the earth, waiting for an emerald-winged hummingbird to fly me on her gilttering back, to teach me to slurp

the flowers' frosting with a curled tongue and roll the sweet warmth around in my mouth.

Dear Friends,

Thank you all for the flowers, cards, prayers and good wishes. It's a good feeling to know that people care so much about you. Hope to see you all soon and Happy Holidays!

ment, in our attempt to develop a new program in radiologic technology. I also know that several students have written to me of their disappointment in the cancellation of the history course on Fascism. I regret that it was canceled; it probably should not have been listed in the schedule in the first place. A careful review of past course enrollments in history courses led us to the conclusion that for this term it was probably best to offer just one course. I am hopeful that we can get this course in the schedule some time in the near future. I appreciate your disappointment and hope you understand the necessity of the action.

Concerns over course scheduling, classroom furniture, and new equipment point to the need for continued communication within our community. I plan to try to find ways to open communication between the students and the university more here at Venango. I expect to meet regularly with your student Senate and to begin holding open forums with the student body one or two times a term. I also try to have lunch or dinner in the snack bar at least once or twice a week. On those occasions I try to chat with students and to listen to their concerns. If you see me there please stop and talk.

I have enjoyed getting to meet the students here and unfortunately have not had as much opportunity to meet as many as I would like. My children were delighted to participate in the A. L .O. Halloween party and we were sorry we could not get to the Thanksgiving dinner. I understand it was a sellout! My wife and I enjoyed the annual dinner cruise on the Gateway Clipper this fall as well as the winter dinner dance last Friday. We look forward to attending future activities as we become part of this community.

As the term draws to a close and the holiday season approaches may I wish you all a joyous holiday and happy new year. I look forward to seeing you here on campus again in January.

Did You Know

John Locke believed that knowledge of the world around us began in sense-perception, and knowledge of ourselves in introspection. It did not begin in innate knowledge of maxims or general principles, and it did not proceed by syllogistic reasoning from such principles.

Jump Into The New With Both Feet

It's not just a new year or just a new semester were are into, it's a time of new ideas, new goals. We're heading for the 21st century.

Didn't we all spend time thinking, even arguing with ourselves about those "New Year Resolutions"? My resolution was to eat three meals a day. I love to cook but I don't take the time to eat. Day one I blew it. I spent the day cleaning out the garbage from the holiday, listening to music and carrying firewood through the snow. Suddenly it was bed time and I realized I hadn't put anything good into my stomache. What three meals?

Lying in bed I had my usual end of the day chat with God. "How is it that I didn't keep my resolution even one day?" I asked. As always His answer was simple and straight forward. "You Were Not Focused. You Did Not Work At It."

I had to change my resolution. I don't want to miss out on anything new, good, exciting. I won't complain when there are not enough hours in the day to watch TV-Nothing New There! I won't worry and stress out over my studies this term- That is something New! I will work at staying focused. That way I will accomplish everything I want to and I will not miss out on the new experiences this day and time bring us. I have faith but faith with out work is dead. So I will work.

It is time to jump into each day with both feet, a smile in our heart and a lilt in each step. We can reach the 21st century walking on the troubled waters.

Women Empowering Women

You Are Not Alone
by Barbara Koehler

Look at us, you are not alone.
We've been battered and broken,
Yet we look so whole.
We've watched the drugs and the booze,
Destroy lives, steal souls.
We have mending hearts and broken homes.

Look at us, we've fought for our health
Against disease and death.
Partners have left us,
Empty children just guess,
As we battle a system
That says we are less.

Look at us, you are not alone,
We're all here together
Learning to stand on our own.
Look at us, we need a friend
As we pick ourselves up
And start over again.

Women Empowering Women is a support group that shares ideas, teaches effective communication skills, and deals with relationship problems in an informal peer setting.

Many have shown interest in this group, but finding a time convenient for all of us has been our main problem. Let us know what time would be better for you. Please fill out this form and drop it off at the Rhoades desk before February 5, 1996.

Vienna Choir Boys

Chance Of A Lifetime

For nearly five centuries, the Vienna Choir Boys have enchanted millions with their unique charm and exceptionally beautiful singing.

Founded by Emperial Decree in 1498, they first visited the United States in 1932. They have given thousands of concerts and become the most popular choir ever to tour North America.

Each season a new choir of boys carries on the rich traditions of Vienna's musical life, tracing it's roots to figures such as Mozart, Hayden, and Schubert.

In concert, they present superbly entertaining programs that feature short operettas (in costume), sacred works, and a broad range of secular and folk music.

This is the MUST SEE concert of the decade! Co-sponsored by Venango Christian High School; Oil City Arts Council; and Franklin Fine Arts Council.

You will never get another chance at such a low cost, just $12 in advance, at the Bookstore. The door price is $15.

Mark your calender, get your tickets. March 1, 1996, 8:00pm, Franklin High School Auditorium.

The Violet

Spring returns, old friends sprout from the earth. A common plant, most of us recognize is the violet. It's edible, medicinal and pleasant to look at.

The flowers bloom sometime in March or April and last into the summer.

Right now there is a poisonous flower in bloom, the Black Hellebore. Pretty but don't touch!

The Downtown People

His lightly grayed brown hair was askew at the part, the ends were split, and the dryness was unremedyable even with conditioner. Bottom line, he needed a hair cut. The eight months of growth made the length a couple inches past the neckline. Rodregous looked at himself, thinking he wouldn't look half bad if he had a trim, straightened the part, and ponied the length. The Boys-in-Suit would have a hay day; Stiffnecks.

He shuffled to a corner where he picked out two of the cleaner dirty shirts from the pile of clothes and a half clean pair of jeans. All of it reeked of smoke (cigarettes and pot) and beer. Occasionally, someone puked on him. He'd rinse out the shirt or jeans, never washing them, because appearances needed to be kept: A small town drunk on Social Security.

"What fun." He'd told the captain after getting the assignment. "Consult undercover." The captain laughed at him.

Seven-thirty-two am, glowed the digital clock through the dimness of the run down hotel room. He didn't want to open the curtains. The looks of the place were bad enough in the dark. The entire place needed condemned. Dressed, Rodregous left his room.

Fist holes were everywhere, wall paper flaked off the ceiling in sheets and the linoleum was muddy and ripped and the floors leaned inward to the center of the foundation.

The squeaky screen door slammed itself shut behind him as Rodregous huffed a vapor in the cold air. He checked his cheap wrist watch; Seven-forty-five. ETA to Darrel's, fifteen minutes, he thought as he tried to walk slow and feeble. An actor, Rodregous thought, I'd be making millions in Hollywood, but no...I'm out here making pennies.

He shook his pocket with quarters and dimes in the amount of five dollars. Limits, he thought. Everyone has their limits, but not all know what they are. Undercover wouldn't have known that, he mumbled to himself, keeping up with his appearance: In Rome, do as the Romans.

He tried the door to Darrel's Tavern. Locked. Doubling back a few doors, Rodregous tried Francis' Feed and Fuzz. Locked. He must look like a jonesing drunk - his image and that was good. He went down to the end of the block to try the other door. As he turned the corner, Larry, the real town drunk, was shuffling up the street. Rodregous became bar mates with him from the first morning drink on the first day. Larry might be a drunk but over the months, Rodregous found him very useful and full of information as well as gossip. Just the thing Rodregous needed to do his job.

(Downtown People)

He waited for Larry, watching him and thinking the man looked too old for fifty. Larry crossed the street against the light. Rodregous checked his watch. Seven-fifty-five. Better stick with Larry and find out some more about the downtown people, he thought.

"Seen Joe with another girl last night." Rodregous said as Larry came up to him. "Yeah." Rodregous looked up and down the street as Larry talked. "Millie, the cow."

Main street went north\south, crossing both east\west one way main streets. "I don't see how he keeps up with them all."

The east\west streets merged in one on each end of town. At the west end, his hotel. At the east end, Darrel's and eleven bars in between. Larry watched his feet as he shuffled ahead. "A different one anytime he wants."

In this town, your either a drunk or a church goer, Rodregous thought.

"You'd think he was a stud or something."

"Maybe he is." Or something, Rodregous thought and tried the rear (or front-depending on what side of the building you were on) door to Darrel's. He held it open for Larry, who had a I-need-a-beer look on his face as he stepped up into the doorway. "Shut the door, Rod. It's cold!" The usual brown haired bartender called.

Rodregous took a deep breath, setting his mind for his job, and entered the dim bar. After his eyes adjusted, he saw Larry seated on his usual stool right in front of the TV.. Rodregous called for a seven and seven as he shuffled, putting bigger holes in the Salvation Army boots. He moved the stool next to Larry over a little before exchanging five quarters with Donna for the drink.

Sitting, Rodregous hung his head and listened to Donna remind Larry to count his straws. Larry mumbled how unfair the rule was cause no one else had it. "No more than ten." Donna took Larry's empty glass and tossed the straw on the bar next to the first.

In another hour he'll be trashed, Rodregous thought. The men watched the morning news together. A few senior citizens came in and one was a regular. Rodregous checked the clock above the register; Nine-thirty; Computing in his brain these facts: The regular was accompanied by a male friend and two women. Rodregous couldn't tell how elderly they were, but knew he'd never seen them before.

Larry was finishing his tenth drink and the senior citizen squad were sipping their second beer. Rodregous had only drank three-fourths of his first. Limitation, he thought. We all need to know our limits.

Donna gathered Larry's straws and wiped the bar clean as Larry staggered out the door. "He's just gonna go next door, sweetheart." Rodregous said. "Let them put up with him."

The regular came up for four more beers, bringing the empties with him. Donna opened new bottles. Chi-ching went the cash register. Clank went the empties. She switched the TV to the Price is Right, sat, and lit a smoke. Routine and boring. Life day in and day out, Rodregous thought. A fat, old black woman came in, taking her usual seat behind the jukebox. As Donna took her a cola, the woman tore open a smoke and stuffed the tobacco in her lip. Rodregous looked away. One of the elderly was putting money in the jukebox. How he wished his assignment could be over? These people were so mundane. He needed adrenaline to live and thrive. He swallowed the last of his drink, plunking the glass on the bar and sucking air through his teeth, which he hadn't brushed in a week.

"He says his name is William, but I'm sure it's Bill, Mack, or Buddy..." Rodregous chuckled at the lyrics. Donna handed him another drink and he handed her five more quarters. Chi-ching went the register. Donna lit a smoke.

Rodregous checked the clock to brake the monotone. Ten-forty-five.

Big Frank, a regular afternoon downtown person, waddled up to the bar. He was short, greasy and the stool couldn't be seen under him when he sat.

All the afternoon regulars came in. Bucak, the last of them, knocked a chair over on the way to the bar. Donna gave him a beer warning him not to cause trouble, her shift was almost over.

"Who's coming on?" Rodregous asked her. "Robin begged for her job back."

Robin came in the door by the other end of the bar. Donna rolled her eyes at Rodregous. Bucak stumbled to the other end of the bar near the pool table and the door Robin entered. He almost fell as he sat. "Anybody got a..." He yelled and put his thumb and index finger together and to his lips. He sucked in.

Rodregous knew the street sign for pot. No one answered Bucak, but the sign was intended for Robin, who was fired because she was caught screwing Joe on the jukebox at the end of her night shift. Incidentally, when she begged for her job back, Robin was put strictly on afternoons. Joe was the man, the stud, the boss, the pimp; Whatever they called the dealers these days.

He looked over at Robin and Donna near the register counting bottles. He circled round to the elderly foursome, who were pretty pi-eyed. The old black woman had left. The twins, Terri and Toni White, were playing shuffle board on the far wall. Terri, the tallest, caught his stare and winked. Rodregous turned, wanting no part of girls Joe had been out with. Bucak slept, clutching his beer on the table. Big Frank was cracking peanuts and sipping beer through a straw.

An endless circle of lives caught up in alcohol and drugs. He slammed his empty glass on the bar. He was a part of it, but he wouldn't be much longer. The drop was to be today.

The twangy country music slipped through his train of thought. He looked at the clock. Eleven-fifteen. Time was going too slow. His sixth sense said something was happening.

Joe Broodwick entered with Julie, a soft, oriental girl. Joe, clad in Australian style, walked up to the bar on the other side of Big Frank. They ordered drinks and when Joe's change was placed on the bar, Julie snagged a quarter. She clanked the pool balls into action while Joe picked a stick.

Joe was early.

The phone rang just as Julie lifted the holder off the balls.

"Broodwick. Phone." Robin yelled. "That's `oo' to you, baby."

"Yeah. Whatever." Robin waved him away. Joe picked up the receiver. "Twelve. Yeah. Noon, you moron."

Rodregous checked the clock. Eleven-forty-five. He scanned the bar. The foursome were leaving. Donna joined Terri and Toni at the shuffle board game. Terri winked again. One last time, he thought, but not winking back. Bucak was still sleeping. Big Frank was now eating the popcorn Robin had put out in baskets. It was over. Finally. He downed his drink. Eleven-fifty.

He slightly glanced at Joe on the way out and took a quick peek at Julie's bottom. HE couldn't resist. Adrenaline pumped in his veins once more. HE was alive!

Outside the boys sat in their cars. One across the street at the bank, one near the light at the end of the block, and one in front of the Feed and Fuzz. Rodregous put all five fingers up at the car parked in the bank and walked away from the downtown people.

Do You Fit the Profile?

What does it take to be a successful student? According to recent research on the learning and thinking strategies of successful learners, here are four strategies:

*Ask questions of new material presented in lectures or books-thinking about which question the material answers and which it does not.

*Break up large tasks and complex ideas into manageable parts

*Direct your studies to meet the goals of the instructor (objectives)

*Take feedback, testing yourself informally to see how much you are learning

*This article can be found in Success in College & Beyond, Marcia Heiman and Joshua Slomianko.

You can learn these strategies and increase your potential for being a successful student. Call Darlene, Ext. 283 or stop by RM 208, MH to find out how you can shape your profile into that of a successful, active student.

Your Right and Your Duty

by Tammy Hernan

In the past week, I have been informed of the following: "The President stinks." "Dole is an old fogy still trying to make his mark in the political arena." "Newt is an overweight Alfred E Newman on a power trip." "Politicians are crooks. They should be kicked out of office." The only problem with these "critics of government" is that none are registered voters. I feel reasonably safe in my assumption that all are well beyond the legal voting age.

These "arm chair political analysts" and the thousands like them, have the power to change the results of an election. Did you know that most local elections are won or lost by only a margin of two to three hundred votes? Imagine that! The student body of Venango Campus could change the outcome of an election, yet, there are many of us who won't register to vote! Avoidance of jury duty is no longer a valid excuse (I'm not sure it ever was). Now if you are a licensed driver, you are a potential juror.

It is your right and your duty to vote, but first you must take five minutes to register. It doesn't cost a thing and you don't even have to leave your house to do it. You can call the voter registration office in your county courthouse and they will send you a form to fill out and return to them, postage paid. It's that simple. Don't you think it's time you take advantage of a right our forefathers fought so hard to protect? You can make a difference.

"In All Directions"

Here on Campus, life is now in high gear and we may be feeling like we are going in all directions. We in Montgomery 205 are! So look out - we are the Pathfinder, your loyal yearbook staff and we're out to get you (on film of course!).

The theme for this year's Pathfinder is, "In All Directions", and if you would like to help us from going in too many directions, you could submit to us, pictures of your clubs, organizations, events, or even yourself. Let's work together to make this Pathfinder great!

Drop off your contributions at the Bookstore or give them to one of the yearbook staff memebers. Remember, the Yearbook Club meets on Mondays in Room 207, Montgomery, from 12:00 till 1:00. We'd like to wish you a wonderful term and may all your directions lead to success!

It's A Tough World

by John Grenci

Neil O'Donnell choked, at least according to some people. I think that is an unfair assessment of how he played. First of all, the Steelers were 13 point underdogs. The Steelers played better than expected, having "beaten the spread." It wasn't all defense either, since the Steelers scored 17 points, a respectable showing. The statistics on O'Donnell read 28 completions in 49 attempts for some 250 yards with one touchdown and three interceptions.

It's A Tough World

Of course the last interception came on the last play of the game, so in effect, he threw two interceptions. Yes, they may have been the two worst passes in Super Bowl history. But sometimes it is not so much a matter of being bad as it is being unlucky. What if his two errant throws resulted in incompletions? We've all seen that happen. If they would have been incompletions, nobody would say a thing.

Let's say a running back rushes for 190 yards and scores a couple touchdowns and is named the player of the game. Let's also assume during the game he fumbled twice, even possibly at crucial times, but both times his teammates recovered. The next day the papers would say nothing about those fumbles. He would be a hero. You might be thinking "Big deal, the actual passes were intercepted!" Tha's true. My point is that sometimes luck is a factor in determining an outcome. Certainly, bad luck does not keep somebody from being the goat. O'Donnell was the goat. Did he have a bad game? I don't think so.

The Steelers outgained the Cowboys in total yards, only the second time in history the losing team in the Super Bowl has done that. After the first interception, some quarterbacks would have folded, but O'Donnell did anything but that. The next two Steeler drives resulted in a field goal and a touchdown, while O'Donnell had 10 completions in 11 attempts. I'm not sure how many quarterbacks could do that, let alone in their first Super Bowl. All in all, O'Donnell had an average game. He did not have a bad game. If you choose to point to the two costly interceptions, then you are going to have to point out the successful Steeler drives, of which O'Donnell played a crucial role.

Before the game, I said O'Donnell was one of the six or seven best quarterbacks in the National Football League, and he did notheing in the Super Bowl to make me change my mind. Ten years from now, will people remember O'Donnell as having an average game? Absolutely not. It's a tough world.

The Stranger and The Spell

by Lora Lamb

Upon a mountain top
High above, far the drop,
Lives a Spell in a castle
So secure, with no hassle.
Far, far below her
Lives the handsome stranger
In his cottage under the sun
In the village where children run.

The Spell one day looks
In her memory books
Finds the Stranger there
Sitting in a castle chair.
In his cottage the stranger sees Someone is upon their knees
Trying to find him,
But the vision is dim.

The Stranger goes to his window
Looks far beyond the meadow,
And sees the castle dull and dreary,
Thinks of the Spell, becomes weary.
He was once upon the mountain top,
Happily he did hop
Merrily all through the day.
The sunshine would never go away.

The Spell had cast him out, you know,
Never a reason; She said, "Just go."
So, he went upon his way,
Not knowing what would become of the day,
Till he wandered down;
The snow began to fall, he did frown.
The Stranger leaving was sad,
But for the Spell, oh, too bad.

The Spell, still staring,
Her heart started caring;
She wanted the sunshine back,
But what could she have lacked,
To make her give the Stranger away;
How awful was that day.
She must now bid him return
So the sun, upon her face, would burn.

See, the Spell once had beauty
When she had her duty.
Her hair was of golden bright
When in her castle there was light.
Her eyes did shine a baby blue;
A reflection of the sky so true.
Her face was smooth as silk,
No sign of whiteness found in milk.

Her body was curved, defined,
Happily in love was her heart and mind,
Her feet danced gaily,
Her smile was daily,
Till she let the Stranger go.
How was the Spell to know
He would take the sun from her?
Now her heart needed to confer.

Through the village the Stranger walked,
Knowing how the Spell talked,
He could feel it in his heart;
The Spell wanted another start.
He began his journey with roses and wine
Hoping to get upon the mountain in time.
He needed the Spell;
He wished her well.

At the bottom, the Stranger did look
To the covered top the snow took.
The clouds abated from the sky,
The sun was true, it had no lie.
The Stranger began to climb,
He knew it would take time
To reach the top to bring life
To make the Spell, maybe his wife.

The Spell lay upon her bed
Too weary to raise her head.
She could hear the clouds roll away;
She knew this was a special day.
The Spell began to twitch her fingers,
But the uneasiness in her heart, it still lingers.
She could feel sensation in her toes.
He is coming. Yes, he knows.

The Stranger and The Spell

As the Stranger ascended
The moss that lay upon the floor
Shrank afraid, to return never more.
His voice rang through the halls,
All evil took their falls.
The sun sprang through,
The portraits drew
A smile upon their faces,
Dust lifted from the cases,

The armor that stood throughout
The Spell's heart, it mended.
When he reached the castle door,
She lay there in her bed no more,
The snow melted into a river,
The castle no more to shiver,
The tree upon the mountain bloomed,
The green, green grass was no longer doomed.

The Stranger entered, looked about
For the Spell he did shout,
The webs of spiders came crashing,
The walls were lite and dashing,
Shined in splendor without a doubt,
The castle knew the Strangers return,
The candles would remain to burn.

The Spell looked into the mirror,
Feeling a bit inferior,
Till her gown of silk became white,
Her hair grew to the color of light.
She could feel the sun in her eyes
Bringing back the baby blue skies.
A miracle, oh, she knew;
The Stranger had come, it was true!

And there he stood outside her door,
The Stranger to leave no more.
He held out his hand to the Spell,
Knowing she had went through hell.
He was going to remain and give her love
The kind that comes from heaven above.
He called her name, once then twice;
She took a step, then thrice.

The moment her hand touched his flesh;
The second her eyes woven to his mesh;
The hour came for a heart to rise
Toward the beauty of the skies.
The rain and sorrow ceased,
The Spell let a single tear release.
In joy, love, and admiration,
For the castle and her restoration.

The Stranger stood tall and firm.
The Spell a lesson did learn:
Love was, but a beautiful thing,
Casting enchantment like a ring,
Simpleness yet complexity,
Firmness yet agility.
Love was understood in heart and soul:
This, the Spell purely did know.

Venango Campus Hoops

The men's and women's hoop teams captured the combined trophy at the Pitt-Titusville tourney on Sat., Feb 10.

The women won their championship by defeating Pitt-Titusville twice in the double elimination tournament.

The men finished fourth overall in their division winning once and losing twice. But it was the win over Pitt-Titusville, a come from behind victory, that helped capture the combined team trophy. An encouraging loss also was to the eventual second place finisher, I.U.P. - Kittaning, 27-24.

The women received medals for the victory. Team members were Kelly Doverspike, Michelle Wenner, Clarisa Master, Rachel Hubert, Melanie Rug and Missy Barrett.

The men's team included Kirby Goodman, Mike Kucherway, Dustin Knight, John James, Loren Burchfield, Joe Reinsel, John Dellich, Ed Whitling, and Eric Klemm.

A Lifetime

by Lora Lamb

There is a lifetime to enjoy one another.
A lifetime of space so not to smother.
A lifetime of moments given to share.
A lifetime of wonderment and care.
There is a forever to last.
A forever to live beyond the past.
A forever giving time meaning today.
A forever to always stay.
There is a lifetime to learn.
A lifetime for those bridges to burn.
A lifetime to touch and know.
A lifetime to share and show.
There is an always to concentrate.
An always that surpasses any fate.
An always to love, laugh, and live.
An always for a lifetime to give.
There is a lifetime between us.
A lifetime to learn what we must.
A lifetime to give all we can.
A lifetime to be a woman and a man.

Putting Litter In Its Place

We have a lovely campus in a scenic area, and our faculty and staff are committed to the environment. So let's do a better job of putting empty cans in the recycling bins conveniently located in every hallway.

If your group is looking for a public service project, how about helping? Check classrooms for those cans left under seats (truly messy when they spill across the floor) and be a real environmentalist by moving them to the bins.

Instead of staring dejectedly into the wastebasket, help the environment by moving discarded cans to the bins. (It's not THAT threatening to pick up someone's discarded can, is it?)

Let's live up to what we know. Next week, watch for some statistics on what recycling saves the environment.

"Everybody's Business - The Business Club"

Everyday, our lives are touched by a hundred different types of businesses. That is why this club is for everyone, not just Business Majors.

A trip to Troyer Farms in Waterford, PA on February 28, 1996

A fund raiser at Rhoades in March

A trip to Kraynak's and Daffin's Candy during Easter Break

We meet at 4:00 pm, the first and third Tuesday of every month, at Rhoades Center. Our next meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, February 20. See you there!

Write-Inn News

To serve you better, the Write-Inn is refurbishing its walls. Remember those tricky little words like to, too, and two, or our and are, and all their bothersome relatives? When we finish our murals, you'll be able to get your answer just by looking.

We do better than your hairdresser: while you wait, you can get the person next to you to read your paper or help you with the PC. Our aim is your satisfaction.

Learning Skills Center

Come tour the Learning Skills Center, Rm 210MH on Family Day, Friday February 23, between 4:30 and 6:30pm. Staff will be on hand to greet you and your family.

See what services are available to you in the center.

Were Back

The admissions office is currently organizing its Spring schedule for outstanding and informative programs here on the Venango Campus. Hold on folks! It's going to be a busy few months.

First of all, new to the campus will be the Health Career Options Fair. It will take place Thursday March 21 at Rhoades Center between 6pm and 8pm. Representatives from surrounding colleges and universities who offer diverse Health degrees will be con campus for a college fair setting. We will also have on hand, professionals such as Chiroprators, Optpmetrists, and Pharmacists to talk about their experience. Clarion University representatives from the health fields will also attend. The health field projection for jobs is outstanding by the year 2000 and the Venango Campus will be leading the charge and vision. This event is free and open to the entire community. Please pass the word to your children, neighbors, and friends.

Step up to your Future, out traditional high school night, will be held March 13 at 6:30 pm in Rhoades Center. This program is open to high school students and those who may have been out of school up to 3 years. We will discuss career options, degrees offered here and at Clarion. This is a great opportunity to start your education at Venango with just tuition. The trend of local students is to start here at Venango Campus.

March 19 and April 25, Angel Muschweck and the admissions office will present "Do it Right" Financial Aid form night. The program will begin at 7:00 pm in Rhoades Center. It is available to current Venango students and any college bound students who will be enrolling in the Fall semester. Representatives will be on hand to walk through the Free Application for Federal Student Aid line by line. More details later, as we get closer to the date.

Last but not least, our headliner program, "Back to your Future". It will be held on Thursday evening, April 11 at 6:30 pm. Since these programs began 2 years ago, we have averaged 56 prospective students at the sessions. This is our Returning Adult evening. Mark your calenders. If you would like to be on our panel of returning adults, contact Dave Katis.

If you would like to volunteer for a program, please contact Dave in Admissions.

Once Again:

Just A Ramble

I use to just sit at my word processor at home and type about what ever came to mind. I haven't taken the time to treat myself to the relaxation of rambling lately so I thought I'd cheat and relax while I was getting paid to work.

I found myself studying last night like you wouldn't believe. My family was even impressed. I was smiling and taking notes, gathering other books to reference. It was the best night of studying this semester. I hadn't even bothered to get up and shut my daughters bedroom door as she practiced her clarinet!!

Vince finally intereupted to see how long I'd be studying into the wee hours. I was done! I showed my paper of plans and data. I had planned my first planting of this years garden.

You all know those intersections out there where you are suppose to stop far enough back for a large vehicle to turn the corner. The one intersection in Franklin, Washington Crossing and Liberty St., is a pet peeve of mine. They spent all this money to widen the corner and it's still a problem. Instead they could have put a delay light to scoot those last few cars through or just simply ticketed people that didn't stop where they were suppose to.

I don't get tired of hauling firewood all winter. My house is dirty and my hands are burnt and scarred from keeping the stove full but I like heating with wood. I wonder how old I will be when I can't do it any more.

I want to always be joyful. No one is happy all the time but you can be joyful inside all the time. That's what I want. I also want some lunch. It's three-ish and I haven't eaten yet today. I did weigh myself and I gained 1 pound. Only nine more to go.

My tipi fell down from all this snow. When I die, they will burn the tipi with me inside. Shit there is probably a law against that. Wonder what they will do with me? Can't say I believe, if I write it down, they'll do as I say. My daughter doesn't do what I say now, why would she when I'm gone.

Okay Okay I'll ramble at home next time.

Hawk Goes To School

It was just like any other day, at first. Get in the car and drive to Venango Campus to work. But then, Wendy Girtman had a brief encounter she won't forget.

While driving through Cranberry, there was a thud, something had hit her car. She stopped and went to investigate. Behind her auto was a small bird on the side of the road, knocked out. Wendy bundled the stunned bird and brought it to campus.

Richard Krear, a local falconer, was called to Montgomery Hall. After a chase and recapture, it was determined the Sharp-Shinned Hawk was uninjured and should be returned to his natural habitat, near where he was injured.

Wendy's friend was released from the car, flew off and within the hour was feasting on a shrew.

Computer Virus Infects Campus

If you are not yet aware, this has been a problem for a while. Computer viruses can be spread from a disk to a computer, from a computer to a disk and from traveling disks. You may have a virus on your computer at home that could reinfect our campus computers and vice-versa. You should consider this computer virus every bit as contagious as a human virus.

The campus is taking steps to help protect it's equipment from virus infection and your cooperation will be necessary for us to be successful. These procedures will also help to protect your equipment and information. Lou Adelson has provided information in the Computer Lab in Frame that will help students to identify and disinfect their disks. A different procedure is in place in the Learning Center (210 Montgomery) that also houses computers for student use. BEFORE PUTTING YOUR DISK IN ANY COMPUTER, LOOK FOR THE SPECIFIC INSTRUCTIONS FOR THAT COMPUTER. DON'T ASSUME THAT YOU CAN USE THE SAME INSTRUCTIONS AT EVERY COMPUTER ON CAMPUS.

Presently, this process is a bit labor intensive but it is the best possible for the equipment now available. The computer committee continues to work on upgrades that will allow the anti-virus procedure to be less labor intensive for students. Your cooperation at this time will make this transition period less stressful for all of us on campus.

"To Be A Hero"

Recently, heavyweight contender Tommy Morrison tested positive for the HIV virus. He was shocked when he heard the news and said, "I thought I was bullet proof. I thought I had a better chance to win the lottery than to contract AIDS."

He blamed himself and hinted that his promiscuous lifestyle was likely the reason. He also said, "To my younger fans, don't see me as a role model, but as an individual who had a chance to be a role model and blew it, who made immature, irrational, and irresponsible decisions---- decisions that one day could cost me my life."

I see a big difference from him and Magic Johnson , who when he found out he had AIDS a few years ago, basically just told the public to"use protection" What a guy!! And for that many made him out to be a hero.

Athletes do have tremendous demands put on them (i.e., to be a hero, role model, etc.). They are human beings like everyone else and sometimes to "be a hero" is asking a bit too much. That doesn't mean they can't do the right thing. In a society that is probably the most promiscuous in the history of civilization, a few years ago Johnson did not do the right thing.

One last quote from Morrison. "I ask everyone out there not to say a prayer for me, but for the true victims of this disease--the HIV-infected children. I had a choice. They don't."

Ironically, in admitting his mistakes, and asking not to be a role-model, he become exactly that.

Two Different Sessions For Health Career Options Day

Thursday, March 21, 1996 has been designated as the "Health Career Options Day" for Venango Campus. The daytime events will take place from 10 am till 2 pm in Rhoades Center. This morning session is mainly for the Nursing and Rehab Students to be able to talk to employers of their major. These representatives will not necessarily have job openings but they will be able to offer our students a wealth of information on what the different opportunities are within a certain field.

As part of the morning sesssion, Kay King, Counselor for Venango Campus will be doing a mini workshop on relationships in the workplace. This activity should prove to be helpful to all students attending. There is no sign-up for this workshop. It will take place in the upstairs lobby of Rhoades.

Throughout the morning, Rotary Volunteers will be performing mock interviews for students. This is the perfect opportunity for students to get at least one interview under their belt and then get some positive feedback for improvement. There are limited time slots available for this service so please be sure to sign up at the door as soon as you arrive.

The evening portion of this program will be to educate the community on what is available in the Health Career Fields. There will be representatives from numerous teaching institutions and professionals from many health care fields to talk to participants concerning their future plans for persuing a health career.

A Business and Paralegal Career Fair is scheduled for Wednesday, April 10. If students have any ideas for businesses they would like to see represented, please contact Cindy Jarzab, Rm 211 MH, Angel Muschseck 206 MH, leave a message in 213MH or call 676-6591, ext 271 to leave your message. Leadership Retreat Inspires by Susan M. Harry

"You have to have a dream that you really believe in."

"If you really want to solve problems, do it."

So said Erie Mayor Joyce Savocchio on Friday, February 9, at the Meadville Days Inn during a joint retreat of the community leadership programs Regional Vision, Leadership Erie, and Leadership Butler County.

And she should know. She brought her vision of revitalizing the Erie waterfront, downtown Erie, and Erie's civic pride to her post as mayor, and a turnaround is happening every day. More and more, Erie's citizens are following her lead: to defeat negativism, to break turf boundaries, and to build partnerships.

As a 22-year old college senior, I was awestruck by the achievements and the enthusiasm of the retreat's speakers. In addition to Savocchio, Margot Copeland spoke of Cleveland's rise to the status of the "New American City" and Larry Yatch spoke of Pittsburgh's recovery from the "Pothole Capital of the World" and smoggy image of the '70s.

Three themes surfaced repeatedly throughout these talks. They are vision, leadership, and community.

The vision to see what needs to be done. The leadership to do what needs to be done rather than wait for someone else to do it. The sense of community pride that inspires cooperation, collaboration, and ultimately success that wouldn't be possible without it.

Think you can't be a leader? Then think about this: As Bill Steiner of the Northwest Pennsylvania Regional Planning and Development Commission pointed out, Henry Ford, Andrew Carnegie, and Mary Kay were "just people who had a great idea."

The next question you might ask is, "What can I do now to help my community and develop my leadership skills?"

If you live in Clarion, Venango, Forest, Warren, Mercer, or Crawford County, are breathing, and have a burning desire to make a difference, you can join the next Regional Vision class. This program, which runs from September to May, allows you to learn what your leadership style is, how you can use your talents for the good of the community, and how to have fun in the process!

Please Consider This

The next time you see someone who has no obvious physical disability parking in a handicapped space, with either a valid placard or a handicapped license plate, please take the time to consider the possibility that the individual may have an unseen problem before you publicly humiliate the person by chastising him or her for parking in a "wheelchair" space.

People with certain heart and lung problems, arthritis and severe back injuries can't walk long distances, especially when laden down with a heavy book bag, without risking further illness or injury.

Perhaps instead of adding to their misery by chiding them because of our assumption that they are not entitled to park in the handicapped space, we should applaud those brave people for attending school despite their discomfort. At the same time, ask yourself if you would like to trade places with a disabled person merely to have a parking place closer to your destination.

Comments from The Editor

I have had good response to my plea for Venango Voice newspersons. (I hate having to be politically correct.)

I want to welcome and give my heartfelt thanks to Tammy Hernan, Jan Pazant, and Miranda Swarm, who have volunteered to jump in with both feet and add flowers and fire to our paper.

I went to the Vienna Boys Choir performance at the Franklin High School on March 1. Since then I have seen nothing in our local papers as to the turn out or the quality of the show or even a "thank you" to the persons instrumental in providing such an opportunity to this community.

Thank you Rev Jay Schultz and the VCHS Drama Club; Oil City Arts Council; Franklin Arts Council and all the individuals who volunteered their time to bring this production to us.

Does The Government Work For Us?

While doing a group project for Dr. Huber's business writing class, we needed more information concerning our topic on HIV/Aids. Where could we go? Well, we decided to refer to the government for information. At first we were really wondering if they would help us at all. Needless to say we tried and in return we found that the government isn't so bad. They in fact were very helpful. The majority of the people in this world don't realize how resourceful the government is. As a group we were very impressed by all the help we received. So to pass the word on, if you ever need anything that they may be able to assist you with don't hesitate to contact them. I think you'll be very pleased that you did.

As a result of us contacting them, they faxed us a 34 page document that has been useful to us. We received it by simply calling an 800 number from a touch tone phone. I must say it was as easy as A,B,C. Well, remember to always keep an open mind, because like they say, "you can't judge a book by it's cover."

The songs performed by the Austrian boys were familiar. I could shut my eyes and remember another time. When the little operetta began and the (I'm guessing) 6 year old boys came out dressed in girls clothing, wigs and patent leather shoes, I was amazed. True professionals.

We are all suppose to be professionals. We are all very human. Show your compassion, patience, brotherly love, and you will be reflecting the Joy of Lord.

What Does Your Soul/Spirit Need?

by Dr. Barb Reagle

This Christmas I received three books on "The Soul". I wondered, was that a coincidence; was life trying to tell me something? Well, I took the hint and started to think seriously about what my unique soul/spirit needs. The more I thought about it the more I realized, we really don't think about this type of thing enough. Most of us rush through life, racing up the career ladder. Why? To get more money. Why? So we can buy more "stuff". Is life one big accumulation of stuff??

So I invite you to take time out and think about the following questions:

1. What does your unique Soul/Spirit/ Essence need? (Use whichever word your framework fits with the best.) Make a written list.

2. To help you with the above question, answer this one: What were you doing in the last year that you feel your True Spirit was being expressed? Make a list.

3. Now the hard part. Are you feeding your Soul? Does your life contain enough elements of the above? Don't get depressed! Most of the time it doesn't, so that's where your future planning and visioning comes in!

Well, thanks for joining me in this quest to make our lives more "Soulful". Good Luck! You can do it!

P.S. If anyone would like to share their list with me (anonymously?) feel free to drop it in my mail box. As I've shared this exercise with my close friends, I am amazed at the similarities in their responses. Perhaps there is a central theme in this quest for all of us - something like love, simplicities of life... not sure. Need to think more on that one.

Maybe an updated article in another issue of the Voice?

To Whom it May Concern:

This letter is in reference to the lecture I presented on Thursday, February 22 for the Student Success Series on nutrition. I understand there are some people upset about my talk on nutrition and drugs. I wanted to set the record straight on a few matters.

First, this is an institution of Higher Education and the teacher's primary purpose is to teach the subject matter for which they were hired. Along with that, it is understood that a teacher should not undermine another teacher's subject matter. If I did that during my talk, I apologize, as that was not my intention. I'm not sure exactly what it is I said that upset some people, but it is probably one of 2 things.

One of the statements I made was that "drugs do not cure." I realize not that was an oversimplification, and that there are drugs that cure. For instance, penicillin does cure some infections. What I really meant was that, in many cases, drugs give the illusion of curing while merely treating the symptom.

Let's look at cancer, for instance, which was the main topic of my discussion. There have been cases where drugs have eliminated the cancer, and the person went on to lead a normal, healthy life with no greater chance of getting cancer than anybody else. However, I was talking about what happens in most cases of cancer, once they have allegedly been removed. It comes back, and I'm not talking 40 years later at the age of 85. Very often, it comes back within 10 years of having first been treated. Why? Because the symptom was treated and not the cause. Do you know what the AMA's definition of having "cured" cancer is? If the person is still alive 5 years after having been treated for it, the AMA claims to have "cured" the cancer. (This is not a subjective statement on my part. That is the AMA's definition of having cured cancer). I guess it depends on your definition of cure. I for one do not consider that a cure.

To reiterate, I should not have made such a bold statement with respect to drugs. I made the statement in a way that I felt was best to get my point across.

The other statement I made was that I believe there are cures for cancer. No, there is no scientific evidence; I can only speak from my experiences. Even if it is true, we may never scientifically prove it.

I would also like to point out that there is a difference between intentionally undermining another teacher and speaking about what you believe in (which sometimes has the consequence of interfering with something that another teacher(s) espouses.)

Let me give you an example. In my Statistics class (Math 221) we are conducting hypothesis testing. In a nutshell, hypothesis testing is where one collects data in attempt to make a scientific conclusion about something. In some cases, one may "hope" not to be able to make a conclusion. (It depends on your point of view). Either way, it is done in a scientific manner, and if you "come up with the evidence, you convict."

What if another teacher gave a talk on TV violence, i.e., that is was bad for kids. A lot of people would agree with that. Now, whether or not there have been studies done on TV violence, one might very well advocate that TV violence adversely effects kids. They are not necessarily going to wait for any studies on the topic. This true whether you are raising your kids or giving a talk on the matter.

Would I have the right to tell that teacher they are undermining my Statistics class because I told my class, they cannot make such a statement until they "prove" it. Of course not. Now, it would be different if that teacher told his/her audience "Mr Grenci is telling you to conduct a hypothesis test, and you should not have to so that in real life, so he is wrong." Yes, that I would get upset over. Certainly, in any setting (giving a lecture, parenting, being a good friend, etc.), there will be people who do not subscribe to having to do a hypothesis test to confirm their beliefs on something.

Coincidentally, in last Monday's Statistics class, I pointed out to the students that when you make a conclusion, it is understood that a mistake may have been made. For example, you may have said you have proven something to be true, but acknowledge (at least silently) that you might be wrong. One student exclaimed "you mean it's just like real life." She was exactly right.

Sincerely,
John L Grenci

You've see the signs around campus and you're scratching your head; what could it be?

The last show in the Applause Series, sponsored by the Campus Activities Board and Parker/Hunter, is a sweet love song and a subtle satire on the war between the sexes.

Two plays-five characters-hundreds of laughs, will be presented at Cranberry High School on Saturday April 13 at 8:00 pm.

Meet the first man and the first woman and find out that they haven't changed a bit.

Herbert & Muriel are a funny-bone tickling duet...a hilarious look at how couples communicate when they have failed to communicate.

The performers are members of the Alpha-Omega Players of the Repertory Theater of America. AOP has traveled over four million miles and presented over 13,000 performances across the United States and Canada.

"Changes In Russia Today"

Do you wonder what Russian business culture is like compared to the United States? Are they experiencing the same problems and finding solutions in simalar ways? There is an opportunity to find out.

Drs. Alfred Mukhamedyarov and Ravil Nasilbullin will be at Venango Campus at 12:30, March 21 to address the Managerial Accounting class in room 115 MH. Greg Barnes cordially invites all interested students, faculty and staff to join the class in listening to these wordly, mind expanding speakers.

Mukhamedyarov and Nasilbullin are part of an international exchange program of professors from the Ufa Aviation Technical Institute in Russia. Ufa faculty prepare specialists in the management of innovations.

Our borders draw ever closer together as the world markets expand. We owe it to ourselves to broaden our mind borders and learn about other cultures, welcome learned representatives from other nations, and share ideas and friendships.

You are encouraged to attend Thursday 12:30 till 1:45 in Room 115 Montgomery Hall.

Health Career Options Day

Thursday, March 21, 1996 has been designated as the "Health Career Options Day" for Venango Campus. The daytime events will take place from 10am till 2pm, in Rhoades Center. This morning session is mainly for the Nursing and Rehab Students to be able to talk to employers of their major. These representatives will not necessaruly have job openings but they will be able to offer our students a wealth of information on what the different opportunities are within a certain field.

Throughout the morning, Rotary Volunteers will be performing mock interviews. This is the perfect opportunity for students to get at least one interview under their belt and then get some positive feedback for improvement. There are limited time slots available for this service so please be sure to sign up at the door as soon as you arrive.

The evening portion of the Health Career Options Day will be held from 6-8 pm. The fair format will include Gannon, Slippery Rock, Edinboro, Pitt Titusville and many other Universities. Profession representatives from the different health fields will be on hand to answer any questions you may have. This program is open to the public and is a great opportunity for high school students and returning adults to find out about numerous health care fields.

Volunteers are still needed to help with the Health Fair. Sign up at Rhoades desk.

Dear Students:

I have noticed that parking does not seem to be such a problem this semester, and yet I still see cars parked on the street. Being a curious soul, I would like to know the reason that those people choose to walk up a long drive, rather than park in the student lots.

Please fill out the following questionaire and leave at Rhoades Desk, by March 26, 1996.

1. I park in the student parking lot.
(a) Yes
(b) No

2. I choose to park on the street because...
(a) I don't have a parking permit
(b) I don't want to buy a parking permit
(c) I never can find a parking space

3. If you have trouble finding a space, what time of the day is it?
(a) Morning before 10am
(b) Morning after 10am
(c) Afternoon between 1:00 and 5:00
(d) Evening between 5:00 and 7:00

4. I am a....
(a) Part-time Student
(b) Full-time Student

5. I drive a...
(a) Full size car
(b) Compact car
(c) Truck or Van

Additional Comments Requested____

Thank you for your input. T'will satisfy a curious mind and also justify our requests for additional parking.

The Study Corner

The Learning Skills Center and Student Senate (co-sponsors) wish to thank one and all for attending STUDY FAIR on Monday March 11. It was nice to see new, as well as familiar faces. The FAIR was an immense success.

A special thanks goes to Dr. Acton for holding his DEAN'S FORUM during the FAIR. He briefly covered such topics as smoking on campus, the parking situation, and air quality in Montgomery and answered questions from the audience.

Another vote of thanks goes to Cori Phillips for her demonstration of INTERACTIVE VIDEO. Cori was at Main Campus; her audience was able to view her on a television screen in the auditorium here at Venango Campus. A question and answer session was held to familiarize the audience with how a class is conducted using INTERACTIVE VIDEO. This is exciting new technology for Clarion University. Contact Frame office for information about INTERACTIVE VIDEO classes that will be available at Venango Campus for Fall 1996.

The bigest vote of thanks goes to the students, tutors, senators, faculty and staff. Without you, there would be no STUDY FAIR.

STUDY FAIR for Fall, 1996, is in the planning stages. In the box below are questions about this semester's FAIR. Please answer them and place the form in the box located at Rhoades. All responses are anonymous. All students, faculty, and staff are welcome to respond. Responses withh help determine what will be offered at STUDY FAIR in the Fall. Thank you for your help.

Looking for a fun (paying) job in a warm, friendly atmosphere? The Learning Skills Center is looking for a few good tutors. On-going traingin is provided. For more information, contact Sally at ext. 274 or Darlene at ext. 283.

The Learning Skills Center regrets the resignation of math tutor Darrin Rowland. Darrin will be concentrating on his studies and a new job. Good luck and thanks to Darrin.

The Center is pleased to welcome Jay Beck as a new tutor for Visual Arts. Jay will be available on Mondays and Tuesdays. See the tutor schedule for times. Jay likes to be kept busy, so please give him the business. Thanks.

Dear Fellow Students:

I regret to inform you that I will no longer be tutoring Math 050, Math 110, and Math 112. I appreciate all the support I received from everyone. If anyone is interested in tutoring any subject they are knowledgeable in, they can see Sally Dolan in Montgomery Hall.

Beyond Obsession

by Lora Lamb

I'm in a mental institution because of a breakdown. I'm a single mother of three. Not that my children have anything to do with my breakdown. On the contrary, two men are the problem. At least, I thought they were two separate men: Somehow my mind made them one.

My psychologists wants me to write everything I remember of these gentlemen. "Getting them straight is the first step to going home, Genevieve." That's me, here alone for being permitted to reminisce.

I have a longing to return to the past and conjure things I would say and do there to change my life's course, but the course only remains. My mother married young and was happy till her death sixty years later, but I've been through many men. My children, all three, have different fathers and none of them are among the two men who caused me to be here.

Surely, the tragedy of a lost love (or loves) is not a part of growing up. "This," Dr. Church said to me. "Is how you must think, Genevieve, at all times. There must be no regrets." Yet my life is full of bitter memories, leaving a bad taste in my mind.

I am twenty-five, but all the confusion started when I was sixteen and meet this handsome dark haired boy of the same age,Doyle Graff, but people called him Do, because he'd do anything.

He stole wicker furniture off a woman's porch only to take it back the next day and leave a note of thanks. Doyle- Do- even stole a large American flag waving from a pole above a restaurant. The cops didn't get far in the investigation and the manager just bought another flag. No one knew who did it until Do showed me where he'd buried the flag in the woods.

He showed me a room in his mom's house which looked like a storage shed for the highway department. There were stop signs, curve signs, and many others he'd stolen over the years.

Do was creative for a typical small town heavy metal teenager. He was into Metalica T-shirts and leather jackets. He had tatoos. A lot of tatoos, especially dragons. He got one on his upper left arm one night while head banging with his long, black hair flying everywhere. He drank and smoked cigarettes and pot a lot. He was always getting arrested for public drunkenness and underage drinking. His record was thick, preventing him from finding a good job. Do tried, though, but small towns don't have much to offer when you're a delinquent sixteen year old.

I knew Do well after dating for a year, but we split up. I ended up pregnant with the first child. Sometime after the birth of my second I got married, though the man wasn't either child's father. After three years of college my marriage of four years went dead. I found out later I was pregnant with my husband's child, but didn't tell him. I went through a divorce, having a baby boy, and getting a bachelor's degree in accounting on my own.

This is the point I met the second man, Walter Tarr. I first saw him in the college library rummaging through art books. I could have sworn he was Doyle. Same long black hair, a heavy metal T-shirt with the sleeves cut off, a tatoo of a dragon on his upper left arm and a leather jacket hanging on the chair. I just stood there all stupefied.

I finally got the nerve to walk up to him. "Hey, don't I know you?"

He looked up at me with big brown eyes. I almost fainted. Doyle's eyes were the exact color. Sure, the man before me had a mustache and go-T, but any man could grow them. My mind was frantic.

"Walter. But I don't think you know me. I don't know too many lovely ladies like yourself." His words didn't sound like words Do would use. They were scholarly and Do's voice wasn't deep. But people grow up, my mind's voice argued.

I shut it up and let the situation take over. I was meeting a man who looked like the man I loved as a teenager. I didn't want to ruin it. I almost called him Do, but retracted by asking, "A Mountain Dew?"

(To be concluded next week)

Russia & USA

Similar Problems and Solutions

It was the most interesting accounting class I ever attended. (No offense intended Greg) Even with the language barrier, an interpretor was used, the information shared about the economic and social problems in Russia, are very similar to what we faced as a new country and problems we must address as times continue to change.

The Russians trade with 63 different countries, following the economic examples of America, Japan and Germany. They must convert to the world accounting system and make major banking reforms. With privitization, they accomplished pushing 40-60 million people into the "below poverty" level. Social problems escalate.

What best to do with natural resources? What path of technology to follow for the betterment of the country and the people? How to deal with unemployment and what is the best way to maximize human resources?

Sound familiar?

The conclusion of:

Beyond Obsession

by Lora Lamb

I was meeting a man who looked like the man I loved as a teenager. I didn't want to ruin it. I almost called him Do, but retracted by asking, "A Mountain Dew?" Starting off a great three year relationship.

Walter loved my children, picnics at the zoo and movies. Gradually, his college classes took him away, but the children and I gave him space which was easy since he lived in his own apartment. He did tattooing to pay the rent and made jewelry from topaz stones and silk woven bands. He was a very creative man.

I wondered about Do, because Walter looked so much like him. I even tried to contact Doyle, but no one knew where he went or saw him anymore.

I believe this is where my mind flipped. Where I began to think Walter really was Doyle. My mind was totally convinced. They looked alike from the hair to the dragon tatoo. Sure Walter was older looking, but people grow up. Walter wasn't a thief, but- my mind said- people change and Do's creative energy for thievery could have been turned for creative good.

During the last six months of my relationship with Walter, I'd ask him questions only Doyle would know the answer. When alter denied knowing anything I'd call him a liar and cry. My mind explained Walter's denials. He didn't want me to know who he truly was because maybe he was in a witness protection program. Thus changing his identity and name.

A memory interupts me now. A conversation between not only Doyle and I, but Walter and I. The words almost being exact.

Do and I sat by the creek tossing rocks in the water. Walter and I were in the park feeding the ducks by the pond.

"Your really quiet. What's wrong?" Both asked.

"Nothing. I'm just thinking." As I think back I believe I shielded my eyes from the sun in both conversations.

"Bout what?"

I looked away, each time to my right. Walter and Doyle, years apart, were at my left.

"What?" Both chuckled.

"You don't want to know."

"Yeah. I do." Both got on their feet to squat and lean their elbows on their knees.

I sighed in both conversations.

Thinking now makes me envision Walter and Do at the scene. "I think of you a lot. More than I should. I feel something. I don't know what, but it's there. I like being with you. You know, all that stuff."

"Stuff. You call love 'stuff'." Walter as well as Doyle replied.

"Yeah, but I don't want to pressure you."

"Your not. I think it's cool you like me." Walter used the exact words Doyle had years before.

"But I have this feeling it could go beyond obsession or like."

"Then let it." Walter had taken me in his arms and Doyle had only kissed me. The only difference in the conversations.

Walter ended being fed up with my accusations and left.

To this day I haven't seen either men together. My psychologist says she's spoke with both men and can tell they are different and living in different states.

"Have you seen the two together, Dr. Church?"

"No." Is all she could say.

I know time is short when it comes to doing fun things, but I encourage all students, staff and faculty to submit a note, story, poem or article to the Voice before semester is over.

Someone suggested HAPPY ADs. Let me know what you think. lem, Editor

Home Huddle

by Michelle Knoch

"Get back here and pick up your coat." "Please take your dirty dishes to the sink." "It's not my turn to take out the garbage." "I don't want to change the cat box right now." Add this kaos to a single parent home with two teenagers, two grade-schoolers, and Mom in school full-time herself; the question comes up, "Is there any hope for sanity to survive?" My dear God in heaven, I hope so! The following is the general scheme I have developed and attempt to follow:

After having a very poor success rate at trying to run things myself as well as feeling drained by and unappreciated for my efforts. I have come to discover that the more my kids feel like they are my partners instead of my pawns., the more co-operation they are willing to offer. Giving them a voice in the matter and respecting their opinions as well as providing choices for them gives them a feeling of being in control of their own role in the family.

A "Home Huddle" is what we chose to call our family meetings. This helps imply the message of being a team for developing team-work tactics. The plan is to have allotted time every week to meet and discuss whatever is going on with everyone. A special treat just for meeting night is an added bonus that also helps encourage attendance.

Everyone has the opportunity to say what they like and don't like using, "I messages" so as not to be blaming others. Then everyone can offer their feelings on why they like or don't like the same issue. With everyone's point of view made clear, it is much easier to come up with a plan of action to deal with whatever the circumstances. All can agree with or at least understand why it has to be so. It is understood from the beginning that Mom still has the final say-so but acceptance of things not entirely negotiable comes much easier.

Group effort co-operation is not the only topic that merits discussion. While gathered together, good happenings can be shared; compliments, praise, pleasant moments. If there is sadness or disappointment, support and advice can be offered. Providing this common ground of understanding, it is possible to pick up on cues throughout the week that can benefit from a word of encouragement or a gentle reminder of guidelines agreed upon in the Huddle.

This system by no means has solved all our problems. Kaos is still a frequent visitor but we are able to function from day to day a bit more smoothly, not to mention having gained a better level of communication and improving everyone's self-esteem. We have made our family goal, "To help each other learn and grow." I feel the bond we share is continuing to become even stronger and that we are better prepared to deal with whatever life throws at us. As far as sanity goes, I think I'm just as happy without it. Who wants a dull life anyway?

Thank You

The students of Accounting 252-51 would like to thank Dr. Acton and Greg Barnes for bringing the Russian Professors to Venango Campus. We enjoyed having them visit.

Also thank you to the Paralegal club (Sec. Wade Redding) for presenting the professors with two Clarion University mugs and a thank you note.

A big thanks to all of you students and staff who helped pull off an excellent "Health Career Options Day" in the morning session. Some of you provided help to the representatives to get set up, some shuttled representatives (especially those service men) from the Penelec lot back to campus (I know it was a tough job but someone had to do it, Jan), some of you rescued the day by becoming instant interviewers and others of you became the temporary "Maxwell House Brewing Headquarters". I appreciate your support for making the day a success.

Thanks also to the Nursing and Rehab. students who attended. I hope that you got some new ideas for employment opportunities.

Applause Series' Last Show A Must See Performance

Sponsored by the Campus Activities Board of the Venango Campus of Clarion University and Parker/Hunter. Adam & Eve & Herbert, a double dip double-bill, will be presented at Cranberry High School on Saturday, April 13 at 8 pm. "The Diary of Adam & Eve," by Mark Twain, is the first act of the Broadway hit musical, "The Apple Tree." Music and lyrics are by famed composers of "Fiddler on the Roof," Jerry Bock and Sheldon Harnick.

"Adam & Eve," according to Emory Lewis of "Cue" Magazine, is a "sweet love song and a subtle satire." Adam, played by Matt Mitchell, is delighted with his private world and is busy naming creatures (such as flyers, swimmers, and hoppers), when along comes an enchanting creature named Eve, played by Jodi Ivey, who sets him straight on these names. For instance, she knows that a parrot is a parrot, not a loud-mouthed gat-beak! She also knows that huts are made for decorating and grass for mowing-by Adam of course. Eve meets her match, however, when Todd Zivin appears as the fast-talking snake. Drexel H Riley, artistic director and founder of RTA, and Dan Bakkedahl, artistic resident at RTA, direct this simple, wry and captivating tale of the first man and first woman.

"I'm Herbert," the second act of the double-bill, is by award winning playwright, Robert Anderson, of "Tea and Sympathy" fame. It's taken from "You Know I Can't Hear When the Water's Running," one of the all-time long-run hits of the American stage; over 750 performances on Broadway starring George Grizzard and Eileen Heckart. "I'm Herbert," according to Dan Bakkedahl, is "a hilarious look at how this elderly couple communicates when they have failed to communicate." Herbert, played by Todd, and Muriel played by Aimee Bye, happily scramble their memories of past marriages with just the right touch of wistfulness.

The performers are members of the Alpha-Omega Players of the Repertory Theater of America, a nationally acclaimed touring company, headquartered in Rockport, Texas. RTA/AOP has traveled over four million miles and presented over 13,000 performances across the United States and Canada.

For ticket information call 814-676-6591. Ticket prices are $10 for adults, $8 for children under 18 and Seniors. Tickets will be half off the above price if purchased by April 11.

This week's TUTOR OF THE WEEK is Kim Bish. Kim excels at tutoring a variety of courses, especially several maths. Kim is often found working with students on her own time. Please thank her. Kim exhibits her leadership skills in many ways around campus. Observe and learn from her to be better prepared for YOUR tomorrow.

The end of the semester will be here in 5 weeks. At that time, professors will expect all projects to be finished. Look at your syllabus. Look at your weekly schedule. Are you on target with the deadlines you set for yourself for each project? If you are ahead, congratulations! If you are on target, stay with it. If you are behind, NOW is the time to get back on schedule. This is YOUR education. Make the most of it. Keep your goals in sight.

It is a long road to graduation, but you are capable of getting there. Some days it takes pure determination just to keep going, but your future depends on it. There will be times you will wonder if you should continue to come to college, but you are worth it. Your family may not understand what you are doing right now, but later they will appreciate it. You may experience an inner weariness, but your clergy person, your counselor, your friends, and your family can help you get through it. Just remember the little train who said, "I think I can. I think I can." Once you get to "I think I can", "I KNOW I will" is not far behind.

FROM YOUR BOOK CENTER!

Graduates

Please come order your cap & gown for graduation May 11.

If order is placed by April 26 the cost is $15.95

After this date the cost is $17.95

Orders must be placed no later than Thursday, May 2 to ensure delivery by graduation day.

The tutors are looking to recruit a few more good students to tutor. If you see students being tutored, observe their behavior. What you will see are very intelligent people working together for a common purpose. The tutor is a very bright person who received a good grade in the subject and is willing to help the tutee get over the hurdles. The student who is being tutored is also very smart because he/she knows a few important things. The first thing the tutee knows is he/she has difficulty conquering the material to be learned. The second thing the tutee knows is that getting help immediately can save him/her from a bad grade or worse. The third thing the tutee knows is where to find the tutor. The fourth thing the tutee knows is once you know where to find the tutor, the next step is to GO TO THE TUTOR!

It's your choice. If you are having difficulties with a subject and choose to believe the silly notion that you have to be stupid to go to a tutor, then you will never be able to envision yourself as one of the intelligent people who went for help when you needed it. On the other hand, if you come for tutorial assistance, you will help to dispel the myth.

A Moment of Joy by Jan Gourley

Today I had a rugged day. When I awoke, I knew it would be arduous. This week and the next are going to be tough here at school. Today in my evening class, a rough draft of my research paper is due. Wednesday, I not only have a speech in the morning, but I have an important test in the afternoon. I have a test coming up next week that will be as difficult as the one on Wednesday. Then, of course, there's a book review that's due soon, which I have barely started.

All of this is enough to keep my mind reeling, but the major annoyance to contend with is my ex-husband! I had to go to another hearing this morning. It was nothing serious, just more bickering over the kids, but certainly enough to dim today's lovely sunshine.

I left the courthouse, the site of so much malice, feeling the weight of the world on my shoulders. I finished my rough draft, then went to school early this afternoon. Of course, when I left class, it was pouring down rain. The large drops were hitting me, getting me soggy, making me think of the Carpenters' song Rainy Days and Mondays. I really was down. Once home, I cooked supper, worked on more homework, then got ready to leave for the college again.

When I walked out of the house, I was struck by the most amazing sight. There was a huge, full-arc rainbow so close, it felt as though I could touch it. I urged my son to come out and look. We enjoyed it together for a few minutes arm in arm, until I had to leave.

I drove two blocks all the while watching the rainbow (probably closer than the road). At the corner stop sign, I was able to get an even better view than before. The colors had intensified and looking left, the base of the rainbow was engulfing the courthouse. That building has always been impressive to me, but amidst a rainbow, it was awesome! The beauty of this vision erased most of the feelings of despair that I had felt in that structure earlier today. It seemed to me to be a gift of hope, a way of letting me know I've chosen the right path for my life.

Somehow, after being so delighted by this apparition, my burdens were lightened, my troubles seemed to diminish, my attitude changed, and for a moment, my soul soared. I wish everyone had experienced this. We all need to feel the enchantment of that instant, to savor it, and to be able to hold something so precious more often.

Take A Trip To The Rainforest

On Monday May 13, the Outdoor Club will be going to the Cleveland Zoo and Rainforest. The sign-up sheet is in the bookstore and there is a two dollar deposit. The trip is open to all students, faculty, staff, their families and guests.

Pool Tournament

The Venango Campus Pool Tournament is underway. Most first round games have been completed. There are still a couple remaining. Please play those games as soon as possible so the tournament can be completed by the end of the semester.

Students who competed in the extra-mural basketball tournament need to see me. We need a team photo for the trophy case.

I am planning on having the quarter finals of the winners and losers bracket along with the finals for the pool tournament on the same day. We can plan on watching the finalists play for the championship.

Please get your games in.

Thanks, Bill Adams

Cindy says:

LAST CALL!

Hear Ye! Hear Ye! From this day forward let it be known to all good citizens of Venango Campus that your last chance to make an appointment with the Career Center Counselor, Cindy Jarzab, is fast approaching. The Day of Reckoning, May 1, 1996 draws nearer with little fanfare, but much ado about finality.

Are you still waiving over a college major or career choice? Did you fail to make that Career Center visit required for extra credit in one of your classes? Do you have a career research report to do that you've "let go" to the last minute?

Don't let the procrastination thief hijack your Career Center bonanza of benefits. After May 1, 1996, he will hold them hostage and Cindy Jarzab will not be available to rescue you until after the Fall 1996 Semester begins.

Hear Ye! Hear Ye! A word to the wise is sufficient!

Go Girl!

Congratulations! KarenStucke received First Place on her research paper, "The Historical Impact of Smallpox".

The winner was selected at State level, held at Main campus April 13. The judging was based on content, presentation and the discussion/question/answer period that follwed.

Financial Aid Forms Night

This program will help each student to properly fill out the Pink Free Application for Federal Student Aid.

In order to be effective, the student must bring a new form (or renewal form if this was mailed to the student around Dec. '95). A completed copy of the 1995 Federal Income tax will also be needed.

If the student has filed a 1040 "PC" he/she will need to contact the preparer of their taxes and ask that the information be converted to a 1040A form. Without this conversion it will not be possible to fill out the Financial Aid Form. The conversion should be free.

Deadline for filing is May 1.

Financial Aid Programs

Two computer programs are now in place to help Clarion University students to plan for their financial aid needs.

Available through Clarion University's World Wide Web Page, http://www.clarion.edu/ is a financial aid section called fast WEB sponsored by the Student Aid Research Through Technology.

This free service provides access to a data base containing information about 18,000 scholarships, grants, fellowships, and loan listings representing billions of dollars in private sector funding.

A Financial Need Estimator is also included, enabling students to know in advance how much money they will need to attend Clarion.

Votes Tallied

The new Student Senators, Fall semester 1996, voted into office by the student body are:

Jay Blondheim
Jess Fulton
Jay Beck
Diane Morrison
Tom Weiser

Get to know your senators are and let them work for you!

In-coming Freshman will vote for their Student Senate representatives in September.

Girls Take Note

One 1950's Home Economics text, intended for High School girls, included preparation for married life.

1. Have dinner ready: Plan ahead, even the night before, to have a delicious meal-on time. This is a way of letting him know that you have been thinking of him and are concerned about his needs.

2.Prepare yourself: Take 15 minutes to rest so you will be refreshed when he arrives. Touch up your make-up, put a ribbon in your hair and be fresh looking. Be a little gay and a little more interesting.

3.Clear away the clutter: Make one last trip through the main part of the house, gathering school books, toys, paper, etc. Then run a dust cloth over th tables. Your husband will feel he has reached a haven of rest.

4. Prepare the children: Take a few minutes to wash the children's hand and face, comb their hair, change their clothes. They are little treasures and he would like to see them playing the part.

5. Minimize the noise: At the time of his arrival, eliminate all noise of washer, dryer, dishwasher or vacuum. Try to encourage the children to be quiet. Be happy to see him.

6. Some Don'ts: Don't greet him with problems or complaints. Don't complain if he's late for dinner.

(If nothing else works....)

NOTICE:

Thank you to all the Student Services secretaries and staff, Business Club members, faculty and of course all the students who attended Business Career Fair. Your attendance and help made the day a great success.

The business representatives enjoyed speaking to our students and we believe many students gained some useful insight into their future employment plans.

We couldn't have done it without you!

Every one is so busy they tend to forget the bright spot of the day, week, month, year. It is about Spring. It is about growth. It is about knowing that "this too shall pass."

We tend to load up on the caffine while we study and try to fit all 200 hours worth of work into a 24 hour day.

Before bed and before those tests, try a cup of herbal tea to help you relax. Be gone stress!

Congratulations to Molly McFadden for being crowned Spring Court Queen, and to all of those elected to the court.

As co-chair of the dance committee, I would like to apologize to all of those people who were offended by having to sign their names to the Spring Court ballots. Let me say, first, that the votes were completely confidential. Only my co-chair, Karey Mallory, saw the ballots. She did not talk to anyone about who voted for who, or how many votes anybody had (even though we were both asked, repeatedly). The fact is that there has to be some kind of check system for us to know if someone, either accidentally or intentionally voted more than once. I would like to remind you tat this is also how voting is done for student senate and homecoming. Yet there were no complaints received about these.

Due to the large number of complaints, there will not be a spring court next spring semester. Any rumors that you may have heard, such as any one person being in the lead by a certain number of votes, were just rumors started by students who did not have any factual knowledge of the votes.

The large number of rumors along with the larger number of rude comments noted on the ballots and even separate pieces of paper placed in the ballot box suprised me. It did more than suprise me, it made it clear to me that a very high level of immaturity exists among the students on this campus.

This is my opinion and not necessarily that of the Campus Activities Board(CAB). Again, if I have offended anyone, nothing said or done was meant to be a personal attack or to be offensive.

Thank you for your participation, both to the court and to those who voted.

Timothy A Rodgers

Can You Imagine

Salisbury State University in Maryland has 2500 live lobsters trucked in from Maine for Lobster night, and offers rattlesnake chili and elk and buffalo meat during Country Western Evening. Each Monday through Thursday night the chefs prepare gourmet buffet meals and students dine by candlelight at linen draped tables as they listen to instrumental music.

At Lebanon Valley College in Pennsylvania, a typical dinner includes six entrees, an 18-foot salad bar, deli meats and cheeses, fresh fruits, soup, five types of freshly baked bread, ice cream, frozen yogurt, other desserts and more than 50 beverages. To match the modern menu, the college revamped its dining hall by replacing the paneling with wallpaper, by carpeting the floors and by adding brass chandeliers.

What $$ Do You Expect To Make

Student Leader magazine, Spring 1995, shows what some expectations of earnings after graduation (poll taken in Fall 1994)
33% - $25,000 to $30,000
10% - expect more than $40,000 immediately after graduation!

So Long, Farewell, Adios, Chow, TaTa, Goodbye!

I feel like I'm giving up my own child as I leave Venango Campus with my Associates Degree. (I am going on to get my Bachelors Degree)

I have enjoyed working in room 205MH for the past two years as staff and then Editor of the Venango Voice. Everyone has been kind.

I can see big things happening with your paper as new staff comes aboard and more technology and resources are available. Help the new Editor, Tammy Hernan, with your feedback and continue to submit your articles, news and fiction, so the paper can reflect this campus.

Those of you that will be on campus next term will be faced with the remodeling of Montgomery Hall, all for the betterment of the campus, so be patient with small inconveniences.

Those of us who are parents know that to have patience all the time is next to saint hood. Daily practice of patience does make it easier to deal with all those unimportant things that make you blow up. Like having to wait in the express line at the grocery store; following a Sunday driver when you only have five minutes to get to class on time; not finding a place to park because of the construction workers that will be here. Try a little patience!

Take time to say hello to everyone you see; smile like you are the happiest (or most senile) person on earth and listen to the quiet, it will make your days sparkling and full.

Thank you all for adding to my life and encouraging me with your words and your friendship. I am definitely a richer person today.
